State Aviation Director John Owens of Jefferson City, left, and instructor pilot Warren Norris of Kansas City stopped in Sikeston Friday for fuel en route to Charleston to pick up National Guard Gen. O. T. Dalton of Charleston. Dalton attended Officers Candidate School graduation exercises in Nevada, Mo., today before returning to Charleston in the 1963 Model B Huey helicopter.

Leading Into Saigon

Red Attacks Close Roads

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks closed two major highways leading into Saigon from the east and south and created huge traffic jams today. A third main road north of the capital was cut anew.

Hundreds of government reinforcements were trying to reopen the roads.

Meanwhile, a new drive was launched by thousands of South Vietnamese infantrymen east of An Loc aimed at regaining control of the old U.S. base in the Quan Loi rubber plantation 60 miles north of Saigon.

Initial reports said 39 North Vietnamese troops were killed as South Vietnamese columns moved toward Quan Loi from three sides. Nine government soldiers were killed and 20 were wounded, field reports said.

U.S. B52 bombers were backing the Quan Loi operation as well as South Vietnamese forces operating on every other front.

On the far northern front, waves of the big bombers pounded North Vietnamese troop concentrations within six miles of the old imperial capital of Hue. Fourteen artillery shells hit the city today, damaging eight houses and wounding two civilians, Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported.

Over North Vietnam, American fighter-bombers launched more than 250 air strikes Friday, the U.S. Command said, hitting supply routes, highways, bridges, supply trucks, water supply craft and fuel depots.

In a delayed report, the command announced that a carrierbased Navy A7 was shot down by a surface to air missile 29 miles southwest of Haiphong on Thursday. The pilot was reported missing.

Highway 1 was closed about 25 miles east of Saigon.

Hundreds of South Vietnamese reinforcements, backed by fighter-bombers, swept into the region in an attempt to root out the enemy forces.

Utilities Injunction Removed

An injunction preventing Missouri Utilities Co. from serving Sikeston residents with electricity through its own distribution system has been removed.

The Missouri Supreme Court has issued an order sustaining the motion of the Cape Girardea utilities company to dismiss an injunctive proceeding brought against it by the City of Sikeston.

The city contended, in its petition for the injunction, that the utilities company was acting without a franchise in the city.

Sikeston's suit was filed on Jan. 10, 1969, in Scott County Circuit Court. It stemmed from action by Missouri Utilities to extend its distribution system in the city during the week of Dec. 10, 1968.

The petition said the city had requested both orally and in writing that the company not make the extension, but the request was denied. Sikeston officials said the city has adequate electrical distribution facilities.

The utility firm asked dismissal of the injunction on several grounds, including its rights to serve customers within the city and to use streets and alleys for the purpose. It also contended the court was without jurisdiction in the matter, which is vested in the Missouri Public Service Commission.

EVEN AFTER TWO heavy rains, mysterious footprints (inside dotted line) can be found on the Kermit Hampton farm near Dexter. The prints are about five inches in diameter and have a unusual heel mark. They run in a straight line between two fields.

Nine Hurt In Area

Two automobile accidents Thursday afternoon resulted in injuries to nine persons in the Bootheel, according to reports issued today by the highway patrol.

At 1:45 p.m. on Route D three miles west of Lilbourn, Larry Tindle, 20, of Lilbourn sustained serious injuries when he lost control of his car, ran off the road and struck a bridge bannister. He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, and later transferred to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Eight were injured in a three-car pileup at 2:10 p.m. on Highway 61 south of Fruitland. Drivers of the vehicles were Phyllis Masters, 28, of Jackson Route Four, William Wallace, 31, of Jackson Route One and Silvia Dove, 34, of Jackson Route One.

Injured were the driver and six passengers in the Masters car, Jerry Masters, 7, cuts and possible internal injuries; Michael Shainer, 12, of Jackson Route Four, head and chin cuts; Beatrice Sullivan, 52, of Portageville Route One, cuts and fractured ribs; John Sullivan, 12, of Portageville, cuts and bruises; Freda Isaacks, 25, of Jackson, cuts and bruises; and Kathy Isaacks, 2, facial cuts. The Dove woman sustained leg cuts. All of the injured were taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

The accident occurred, the patrol said, when the brakes failed on the Dove vehicle as it was coming onto the highway from a private drive. It reportedly struck the Wallace car twice before hitting the Masters car head on.

Fire Damages Home

One Thing For Sure

'Monster' Prints 'Strange'

By RON PORTER

You may have heard the reports of strange "monster" footprints being found on the Kermit Hampton farm near Dexter last week.

The prints are round, about five inches across with a strange heelmark and run in a straight line between two cotton fields.

Well, relax.

Tim Ludwig, The Daily Standard wire editor, and I went to Dexter Thursday and wallowed around in a muddy field investigating the prints. We conclude they were not madeby a strange monster, but were made by a strange horse.

The prints were found last week by Hampton, Ruben Kitrel of Bloomfield and his 15- year- old son Mike. They had gone out into the field, located six miles southwest of Dexter on Route ZZ, to test a new rifle, when the stumbled upon the tracks.

Whatever made the prints was heavy. Each print was unk deeply. The men did not even leave a heel mark. After two hard rains, the prints were still clearly visible Thursday.

At first, the men didn't pay much attention to the tracks. But then they noticed that the tracks ran in almost a perfectly straight line. A closer look showed they were round with heel marks about four inches behind.

Horse fanciers who have seen the tracks deny they could have been made by a horse. They are taking an "I'd have to see it to believe it attitude."

"What on earth would somebody be doing riding a horse down here?" Kitrel asks.

Maybe he can get the answer if he can find the young Dexter man who has been telling people that he rode his horse through the field shortly before the tracks were discovered.

Hampton still doesn't think the tracks were made by a horse, even if someone says they rode through the place where the tracks were found. He says the horse that made those prints would have to be pretty strange.

We agree.

Of course, we recognize the other possibilities. It really could be a monster. Perhaps the one from the northeastern part of the state thumbed a ride on the interstate to Sikeston and then worked its way over into StoddardCounty. It could be done. People who gave him a lift would have thought he was just another college kid.

It might have been a practical joker walking around with coffee cans strapped to the bottom of his feet.

One man, who will remain nameless, suggested the prints were made by a kangaroo. He did not explain what a kangeroo was doing near Dexter.

House Approves Freeze On U.S. Soviet Missles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved the fiveyear U.S.-Soviet missile freeze with only seven dissenting votes but more numerous expressions of trepidation.

The resolution passed 329-7 Friday, although several House members voiced concern that it might allow the Soviets to achieve nuclear superiority.

The action came as Congress adjourned until Sept. 5 for the Republican National Convention and Labor Day.

"I just pray this will not be a nuclear Yalta," said Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., who voted with the majority, as did most others who voiced similar fears.

Senate approval remains stalled over an amendment proposed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., urging President Nixon to seek U.S.-Soviet equality in weapons numbers in any permanent treaty replacing the interim accord. The Senate takes up the measure after the congressional recess.

The five-year agreement signed by Nixon and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow May 26 freezes land-and sea-based intercontinental missiles plus missile-firing submarines at the totals in existence now or under construction.

The Russians are limited to 1,618 land missiles and up to 62 submarines with up to 950 missiles, the United States at 1,054 land missiles and up to 44 submarines with up to 710 missiles.

Both sides are permitted to replace and improve the submarine missiles, including equipping them with multiple warheads.

Warheads and other weapons including shortrange missiles and bombers are not covered by the agreement.

House Foreign Affairs Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, DPa., said the five-year agreement could save the United States $2 billion a year by slowing down the arms race.

Pucinski and Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said the agreement's curb on the Soviet missile buildup was the reason they voted for it

GOP Urges Demos To Reject Left-Wing 'Radical Clique'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republican platform being readied for next week's GOP National Convention invites Democrats to vote for Richard Nixon and forsake what it says is "the radical clique" controlling the Democratic party.

The draft of a first platform section, endorsing a strong defense and standing pat on Nixon's peace-with-honor terms for a Vietnam settlement, was issued late Friday. Two sections on domestic issues are soon to follow.

The draft platform predicts that the Nixon bandwagon will be joined by "millions of discerning Democrats and concerned independents who will not, and cannot, take part in the convulsive leftward lurch of the national Democratic party."

Asserting that the choice for voters is between "strength and weakness for our country in the years to come," the platform extends its open-arms welcome to Democrats in a five-page preamble:

"We invite our troubled friends of other political affiliations to join with us in a new coalition for progress.

"Together let us reject the New Left prescription for folly and build surely on the solid achievements of President Nixon's first term."

The draft will reach the convention Tuesday. Its adoption is considered certain, though floor skirmishes on women's rights and school busing are possible.

The platform language suggested that Republican emphasis on alleged leftward leanings of the Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern, will be a running theme of the GOP's campaign.

The GOP platform draft pledged a continuing quest for a Vietnam settlement permitting the people of Southeast Asia "to live in peace under political arrangements of their own choosing."

It endorsed Nixon's "refusal to accept terms which would dishonor his country" by yielding to Hanoi's demand that the United States scuttle the Saigon government in favor of a Communist-dominated regime.

The plank endorsed Nixon's offer to withdraw remaining American forces four months after an internationally supervised cease-fire has gone into effect and prisoners of war have been returned.

In addition to calling for the return of prisoners and an accounting of the missing in action, the plank declared:

"Here and now we reject all proposals to grant amnesty to those who have broken the law by evading military service."

Hijacker Shot By FBI Agents

SEATTLE (AP) — A 43-yearold objector to the war in Vietnam is under guard in a hospital with bullet wounds in the shoulder and leg inflicted by FBI agents in the climax of an elaborate airliner hijack.

Before it ended, the skyjacking covered 12 hours and more than 800 miles—from Reno, Nev., to Vancouver, B.C., and back to Seattle.

Authorities identified the wounded man as Frank Markoe Sibley of Stateline, Nev., and said he would be charged with air piracy. Sibley's wounds were described as serious but not critical.

Sibley was shot in the hijacked United Air Line Boeing 727 late Friday night after his demand for 15 gold bars worth $15,000 had been met in Vancouver and $2 million in cash was delivered to him in Seattle.

Two FBI agents boarded the hijacked plane under the guise of airline employes after the sky pirate insisted on new crewmen.

While the agents were forklifted aboard the 727 seminude to prove they were unarmed, other FBI men prodded a gun on a pole into the cabin. With that weapon, the FBI agents confronted the hijacker in the cockpit as he held an army-type carbine on the airliner's pilot, the FBI said.

An FBI spokesman said about five shots were fired, two of them striking Sibley.

The FBI said Sibley tried to resist after he was hit by drawing a knife but was wrestled out of the plane and to the ground where he was overpowered.

The drama started in Reno early Friday. The hijacker pedaled a bicycle through a hole in a fence and up to the 727, which was preparing to leave for San Francisco with 52 passengers. He was holding a rifle and wearing a ski-mask. A passenger ran into the terminal to report it. Passengers and stewardesses in the plane were hustled out.

Three Youths Held For Burglary Investigation

BENTON -- Three youths are being held by the Scott County Sheriff's office for investigation of burglary of the Joe Spencer home in Chaffee, which took place late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

Being held are Elmer Penrose, 21, of Oran; Clyde Eichhorn, 18, of Chaffee; and Alan Wayne Slinkard, 19, of Chaffee Route One.

They were arrested at their homes Friday, after Deputy Sheriff Dave Sanders was told by a Chaffee policeman that he had seen a car containing what may have been some of the stolen property. Sanders traced the youths through the car.

The youths reportedly admitted the burglary and led police to the stolen property. Police recovered the stolen items, including two stereos, two speakers, a control panel for a shortwave radio, a quantity of wire, a pistol and a pair of brown boots.

Randy Anthony Herron, 18, of 1401 West Murray Lane, was injured in a one-car accident around 12:45 a.m. today when his car ran off East Malone Avenue and hit a city lightpole.

He was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital with a slight concussion and a broken nose.

His car was badly damaged and the light pole at the corner of East Malone and Ingram Street was destroyed, according to police.

Herron was charged with careless and imprudent driving and destroying city property.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE WAY IT IS

Some Peacemakers aren't really for peace.

Some Capitalists aren't really capitalists

Who are the peacemakers who would make peace at the price of military readiness?

How can they speak of peace while seeking the obliteration of the only force which stands between a free world and the war lords of Russia? How can peace be made by trading with a country whose avowed aim is your destruction?

What is the game? Who plays with the fate of two billion people?

U. S. Rep. John Schmitz of California put names to some of the faces when he wrote, in the Congressional Record, "Who Is Destroying Our Armed Forces?" He quoted a passage from James Rowe's Five Years to Freedom, the true story of a Green Beret's imprisonment by Vietnamese Communists. But inquiry cannot end with Rep. Schmitz's ticking off of names of antimilitarists; the story is deeper than that and is examined in relation to a complex of money, power and internationalism.

Rep. Schmitz's "Who Is Destroying Our Armed Forces?" begins with a paragraph from Rowe's book:

"I could understand opposition to a war and a strong desire for peace. There was nobody who wanted peace more than a soldier because it was his life that was sacrificed in war, his blood that was shed. There couldn't be a protester at home who matched a soldier's sincere desire for peace. Dissent was a part of American life, but to support the enemy at the expense of another American was inconceivable. There was no other place the VC could have gotten some of that information except from the United States and I suddenly felt very sick."

Major Rowe, a Green Beret who spent five years under the most hellish conditions as a prisoner of the Vietcong, had first told them a "cover story" that he was only an engineering officer unfamiliar with the defenses of the Green Beret camp where he was taken prisoner, though in fact he was its executive officer and knew all about its defenses. That fact was given to his captors by traitors in the United States, thus assuring that he would be put to further torture.

The House Internal Security Committee on which Rep. Schmitz serves has been holding hearings on subversion of the military. He is in the process of arranging testimony for the committee from Major Rowe, and the committee has already heard from four-star Gen. Bruce Clark, former commander of all Army ground troops in Europe. General Clark revealed that in 1966 and 1967 there were posters all over Europe, both in headquarters areas and individual unit day rooms, which identified communism as the enemy and reminded our troops that they were there to deter Communist aggression. But when General Clark returned to Europe three years later the posters were gone. When he asked why, he was told they might annoy the Soviets.

As long ago as 1961, the Fulbright memorandum sounded the death knell to educational programs in the military explaining the real nature of the Communist enemy. Senator Fulbright states in that memorandum:

"Fundamentally, it is believed that the American people have little if any need to be alerted to the menace of the cold war."

Fulbright sowed the seed; and in the Communist Daily World for January 28, 1971 — 10 years later — we find an update of his original memorandum, now entitled "The Pentagon Propaganda Machine," vociferously declared must reading for every Communist and fellow traveler in America. Senator Fulbright opposed and continues to oppose any military instruction characterized by "talks from persons who stressed the Communist menace in this country."

He was also one of those who called for the bombing halt that has since doubled American casualties, while stating:

"We could resume bombing at any time if there is no response."

Schmitz's article asks:"Ask the loved ones of the over 50,000 dead and the over three million veterans of the Vietnam war if there has been any response.

"The official policy of our government has become that of the Fulbright memorandum, creating a peculiar - to say the least — educational situation in the Armed Forces. The March 30, 1970, Contemporary Military Reading List of the U. S. Army — Circular No. 1-26 — tells part of the story. The first book synopsis is the Discipline of Power, by George W. Ball, who is indexed for 5-1/2 pages in the congressional 'military muzzling' hearings in opposition to educating our Armed Forces in the nature of communism."

Ball was quoted as outling official government policy in this way:

"Nothing must be done to endanger communications between this country and the Communists. No reference must be made to communism as the enemy. Furthermore this country is not striving for victory in the Cold War. The United States should not under any circumstances refer to Communist tactics as brutal nor should the word slavery be used in referring to Communist takeovers of captive people."

It was George Ball who in 1968 had the job of persuading Congress "that US trade with Russia and its satellites would promote peace, soften up Communist regimes behind the Iron Curtain and end the Cold War."

Schmitz goes on. "Tell that to the widows of officers who have been shot down by Soviet antiaircraft rockets made in the Soviet Union. Trade agreements with a nation which supplies so many of the weapons used to kill our fighting men surely fit the constitutional definition of treason as giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Our troops who have been killed by the products of this trade can no longer cry out for justice against the likes of those who have forbidden them to learn about the enemy they have given their life's blood to fight. Nor do most Americans in high places seem ready and willing to do it for them."

John F. Kennedy put George Ball in the number three spot in the State Department, a power position Ball used to muzzle the military. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) and a trustee of the American Assembly and a member of Clarence Streit's Atlantic Union, long-time sounding board for one world government.

Ball also heads Lehman Brothers International, part of the Lehman investment banker firm.

There is a money and ideological linking among the international bankers, some of whom have financed international communism and all of which openly or secretely promote trade with the Soviet Union. Such firms with CFR members in their corporate ranks are Kuhn Loeb & Co., Lazard Freres (a patriarch of which recruited Eugene Meyer into the firm before Meyer founded the Washington Post, a most extreme liberal daily), and, yes, Lehman Brothers.

The investment bankers arrange mergers for corporations and often put up all the cash to purchase shares of new issues of stock which they sell to the public.

Peaceniks whose political heroes are Jake Javits and Ted Kennedy would be appaled to learn the two Senators are quite close to the head of one such investment banking firm which has underwritten stock issues of such as the napalm makers and the "smart bomb" makers and other firms that supply the munitions of war. To think that the doves would enter the nest of those who would aid and abet the killing of innocent Vietnamese Communists! Any radical lib could ask: Is there no end to duplicity? If profit is to be gained by grinding the faces of the poor, let the hated capitalists do it, but spare us the knowledge that our liberals are even remotely involved.

The international bankers, whose role is fully explained in The Naked Capitalist, finance and help reorganize corporations, and place directors on their boards. A search through Standard and Poor's Directory shows that most companies which have an association with the CFR do not connect with it directly by officer affiliation, but by having CFR members on the board of directors. The internationalists also influence government policy by placing CFR members or non-CFR people of internationalist bent in government.

The recent trip to Moscow opened the American door to trade with Russia as never before, with untold riches accruing to those who hold the reins of power or the stock of the right companies. The international socialists dressed in capitalist garb apparently cannot lose. They will be helping mother Russia which has welched on many a deal; no matter, the government will bail the American traders out if Russia should cause them a loss. The bailout will come from the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC), an independent agency of the government which is run by, of course, two CFR members.

The game is difficult to figure. It seems to be purely for profit with a side benefit of aiding beloved Russia, while moving to a one world state. Who will rule .this behemoth and its subjects? Will the Internationalist - socialists who pose as capitalists? Will the Communists? Probably the latter, because in 1917 when one international banker, Jacob Schiff of Kuhn Loeb & Co., gave the bolsheviks $20 million, the Russians had nothing but starvation. Now they've got a third of the world's population and nuclear missiles pointed at the rest.

So it remains to be seen if the game can continue to be played as it has been: the balance of power between Russia and the United States being manipulated by the internationalists who put governments and corporations in hock to them, and control international credit and pave or block the avenues of trade.

So far, progress toward so-called "world peace" and "One World" has been written in blood, from the Winter Palace in 1917 to Quang Tri City 1972. If this be the seeking of peace, war must be hell indeed.

BICYCLES AND SAFETY

From the Hartford Courant

As anyone who has tried to buy a bicycle lately knows, lots of people are doing the same thing. Santa ran seriously short of Christmas bikes last year, and manufacturers are running at full tilt in a futile attempt to keep up with the sudden demand.

Thsoe who have been lucky enough to obtain their bicycles are using them in unprecedented ways and numbers. At one time, bicycles were used mainly by youngsters around their own neighborhoods and schools. Now, adults are joining the crowd and are using their bikes for the sake of health, recreation an pollution -free transportaion. Many are used for commuting and shopping trips.

The increased bicycle traffic and the changes in the way they are used has, understandably, led to an increase in bicycle accidents, an increase large enough to attract the attention of the National Safety Council.

Except for uncrowded areas or a few specific bicycle paths, a bike rider can easily find himself dangerously out of place. He is vulnerable in heavy auto traffic, and if he moves to the sidewalk, he presents a danger to pedestrians.

The Safety Council has just launched a three-year study of the bicycle safety problem. It will look into the types and causes of recent bicycle accidents and try to develop a practical program to prevent them.

The bike boom has outdistanced most existing safety programs, which have primarily been rather lightweight efforts aimed at young riders. The Safety Council's new program is an effort that, whether we really know it or not, appears to be needed.

The average head of hair, male or female, was thought to contain 100,000 hairs. But that was before an ambitious cosmetics firm started counting! The results: Blond heads have 180,000 hairs, as contrasted to 120,000 for brunettes, and 50,000 for redheads.

Red beards are toughest to shave, blond beards easiest. One inch of beard grows in about eight weeks, so it can take six months to produce a full Peter Ustinov jobl1

GUILD ENDORSEMENT

Traditionally, newspaper reporters have remained aloof in politics and devoted their energies to non-participant, objective coverage of party activities and elections. Now the American Newspaper Guild has broken precedent and voted an endorsement of Sen. George McGovern in his bid for the presidency. Legally there is no challenge of the Guild's action. Nor is there a challenge of its selection of candidate, but the wisdom of endorsing anyone is a matter of grave concern.

The people of this country, in fact the world, have come to expect non-biased reporting of our political doings. We have a right to expect no less and we may still get objectivity. It was this Guild, voting as a union, that endorsed the candidacy of Sen. McGovern. Individual newsmen may still meet their responsibility of unbiased coverage.

Suspicions will exist, though. These suspicions will be voiced by candidates and the electorate alike. By tradition, labor organization is for the purpose of salary and rights bargaining. The courts long since have upheld the rights of reporters to organize. The rights of the public to objective reporting have existed since the foundation of the Republic.

It is the belief here that a vast majority of reporters covering this fall's election will meet its responsibility to the people. If they do not, we are in for serous trouble. The term Fourth Estate has a significant and precious meaning. The Fourth Estate members should remain aloof from the other three and report their doings. The system is as vital to the cause of freedom as government itself. HLH.

Justice Dept. Strike Force Network Has Crippled Mafia's National Syndicate By Victor Riesel

U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst notes here that the Democrats have charged the Nixon administration has given the country nothing but tough words.

In a fighting mood the comparatively new Attorney General challenges this and with a counterthrust says the Nixon White House has built the strongest anti-organized crime machine in history. Here is one of the Attorney General's first full analyses made since he was confirmed. It was written exclusively for this column. By Richard KleindienstAttorney General of the U.S.

WASHINGTON -- The Nixon administration's record in coming to grips with the problem of crime in the United States was the subject of some concern recently by the Democratic Platform writers. "This Administration," they declared, "has given us nothing but tough words."

And having made this claim, the Democratic platform writers promised to attack the crime problem by upgrading police forces, improving their technological capabilities, bringing organized crime to justice, opening a massive assault on the drug traffic, mounting an all-out drive against corruption in government, and other equally laudatory measures.

There are two things wrong with this plank in the Democratic platform.

First, the hallmark of the Nixon administration's onslaught against crime has been not words but action. The crime epidemic which grew to alarming proportions during the previous Democratic administrations, whose response was to study the problem without facing it, is now being turned around under the national leadership of President Nixon.

Second, almost all of the remedies proposed by the Democratic platform to cut crime have long since been adopted by the Nixon administration. They are among the reasons why we are succeeding where the Democrats failed.

Violent crime more than doubled during the tenure of the Democrats from 1961 to 1968. They answered the problem by creating a crime commission to investigate it, and then proceeded to ignore most of the commission's recommendations.

They opposed legislation to assist law enforcement officers in bringing offenders to justice, including the use of court-authorized wiretapping that Congress provided against organized crime.

The sum total of their Federal assistance to state and local criminal justice systems was less thean $34 million.

After this record during the eight years of rising crime while they were in office, the credibility of their new-found concern for the safety of the American people seem somewhat disingenuous.

By contrast, the Nixon administration has mounted a total assault on all fronts against the crime wave in the United States.

We have provided national leadership and financia assistance totaling $1.5 billio to the states and localities in the past three fiscal years and, despite politically inspired criticism of this program, Congress has shown its confidence by approving the $850 million that we requested for the 1973 budget.

We have mobilized every possible Federal resource in attacking the drug traffic and drug abuse. We have won the active cooperation of the foreign countries that have been the sources of narcotics entering this country when many of our opponents said it couldn't be done.

One result was that, in 1971, Federal authorities removed from the world market about five times as much heroin or equivalent opium derivatives as were removed in 1968, the last year of the previous Administration. More recently, an additional program of cooperation between Federal, state and local anti-drug agencies, aimed at disrupting heroin traffickers at the street level, has resulted in more than 900 arrests since May of this year.

This offensive has created shortages of heroin in some of the major American cities, and one result has been to bring thousands of addicts into treatment centers established with the aid of Federal funds.

In our drive on organized crime, where the previous Administration had established only seven Strike Forces on an ad hoc basis in large American cities, we have put them on a permanent basis and increased the number to 18. And whereas the previous Administration had refused to use the court-authorized wiretapping provided by Congress, we have employed this enforcement tool from the beginning and have gained evidence against hundreds of racketeers that was unobtainable any other way.

As a result, we have mounted a far more effective drive against organized crime than had been possible before. In 1971 we obtained indictments against more than 2,600 members or associates of organized crime syndicates--more than triple the number indicted in 1968. Convictions of such persons in 1971 nearly doubled the number in 1968.

In New York, Chicago, and many other cities we have torn big gaps in the ranks of the top gangland leaders.

Finally, what has been the overall result of the Nixon administration's drive against crime? We can only take part of the credit, because most crimes are not Federal crimes, and the states and localities have also redoubled their anti-crime efforts. But for the first time in many years, the latest statistics show that the rise in crime has been reduced to a par with the rise in population. For the first quarter of 1972, serious crime in the United States showed only a 1 per cent increase over the same quarter in 1971.

This is part of the trend that has been apparent in annual statistics for three years. In 1968, the last year of the previous Administration, serious crime rose 17 per cent. Since then the increase has been tapering off -- 11 per cent in 1969, 10 per cent in 1970, and only 6 per cent in 1971. The first-quarter figures for 1972 show that we are now within reach of an actual decrease in crime.

This has already been accomplished in a growing numger of large American cities which have populations of 100,000 or more. In 1969, 17 such cities registered actual decreases in crime. In 1970, the number rose to 22, and in 1971 it climbed to 53 cities. For the first quarter of 1972, 30 cities showed an actual decrease.

One of the cities spearheading this reduction has been Washington, D.C., the only city under Federal jurisdiction. All through the '60s, however, crime increased at a dangerous rate. The criminal justice system in the nation's capital was incapable of dealing with this desperate problem. Little had been done by the previous Administrations to reform the system in their own backyard.

But between 1969 and 1971, crime in the District of Columbia decreased a total of 18 per cent. For the first quarter of 1972, crime was down more than 30 per cent from the same period in 1971.

The reduction in crime also applies to the very large metropolises which have been the major contributors to crime – and to the fear of crime. In the first quarter of 1972, total crime in the six largest American cities (those of more than 1 million population) decreased 6 per cent, compared to a 12 per cent increase in the first quarter of 1971.

These statistics are very heartening to the Department of Justice. They should be equally encouraging to all law-abiding citizens. None of us will be satisfied, however, until we see an overall reduction in the crime rate. With the increase down to 1 per cent, we hope that this day is close at hand.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

MIAMI BEACH -- No one is holding his breath over the outcome of the Republican convention at Miami Beach. But in the smoke-filled backrooms, the maneuvering already has started over the 1976 presidentail nomination.

The Republican faithful, of course, won't challenge President Nixons's choice of Spiro Agnew as his running mate for another term. But this doesn't mean they are ready to accept him as Nixon's successor in 1976.

Agnew has already signalled his intention to move up to the front of the ticket four years from now. But opposition is developing, particularly among GOP moderates. They have dropped quiet hints that Agnew would appeal to the same limited constituency in 1976 as Barry Goldwater did in 1964.

Although Richard Nixon will be a lame-duck President at the 1976 convention, he should still control the party machinery. He could, if he wished, determine who his successor will be.

White House aides tell us the President would not impose his choice upon the party but would remain above the struggle. The anti-Agnew forces, however, are taking no chances. They intend to present their arguments to the President in the months ahead.

They will plead that the party's future could be impaired by an Agnew candidacy and that he should be headed off before he can gain too strong a hold on the party machinery.

ROCKEFELLER'S ROLE

The anti-Agnew Republicans also look hopefully to New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller for support. Agnew was Rockefeller's most vocal champion in the early 1968 presidentail maneuvering. But Agnew adroitly switched to Nixon in a manner that won him the vice presidency and lost him Rockefeller's friendship.

Rockefeller, however, has been snuggling up to President Nixon lately and, in the process, has improved his relationship with Agnew. The New York governor, therefore, may not be available to challenge Agnew in the struggle ahead. Aware of the political axiom that you can't beat somebody with nobody, some Republican moderates are rallying, meanwhile, around Illinois' Senator Charles Percy as the best man to stop Agnew in 1976.

It is perhaps a measure of their desperation that the embryonic Percy for President forces have spread the rumor that Agnew, after getting the vice presidential nomination, will resign and invite the convention to choose someone else.

The reason, according to the rumor, is that Agnew has had his fill of politics and would like to devote himself now to making some money for his family. But he is a proud man -- so the story goes -- who didn't want to appear to be dropped from the ticket.

A spokesman assured us Agnew is ready with acceptance speech. Others close to the Vice President says he has every intention of using his position for the next four years to consolidate his strength with the party and to go after the presidential prize.

Footnote: Former Secretary of the Treasury John Connally might also challenge Agnew for the presidency. There can be no denying the rivalry between the two men. Connally, apparently, in keeping his options open whether to become a Republican or remain a Democrat. California's Governor Ronald Reagan also has an eye on the White House. But he could lose his power base in 1974 when his term as governor expires. He has mentioned guardedly that he might run for the Senate against Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who must stand for re-election in 1974. Reagan's popularity in California, however, has been declining.

NIXON'S GULF

A relaxed President Nixon hopes to mix a little golf with politics during the Republican convention.

He is the first to acknowledge, however, that he's no Arnold Palmer. He tells the story on himself about the time he proudly announced to his foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, that he had scored 130.

This is hardly championship golf, but Kissinger wanted to be tactful He said he was glad the president had enjoyed his golf game.

"I was bowling, Henry" growled the President. His game at the White House bowling alleys, as the score indicated, had been improving.

Footnote: One of the President's most treasured trophies, however, is a golf score card appropriately lacquered and framed. It records the occasion 11 years ago when he scored a hole-in-one at the Bel Air golf course in California. The President is sure to bring it up when the anniversary comes up on Labor Day. What he doesn't usually mention is that he scored a six and seven on the holes before and after his miraculous shot.

Ford 'Speculates' On Peace Report

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Emphasizing that he was commenting on "a strictly speculative basis," House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford said today there is a "possibility" an announcement concerning peace in Vietnam may be forthcoming at the Republican National Convention.

But he added at a news conference he had no inside information about the possibility of President Nixon making such an announcement when he makes his acceptance speech next Wednesday night.

The President's foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, returned today from another visit to South Vietnam and scheduled a report to the President.

Ford, who will be permanent chairman of the convention starting Monday, also said there "is a possibility" that Republicans will capture control of Congress in the 1972 elections if the President "runs well."

The odds against picking up the 38 to 40 seats needed to win the House are slightly against the Republicans, Ford said.

Ford said he hoped the Senate would act promptly on the antibusing bill passed by the House this week.

"It would be absolutely unconscionable" if a filibuster blocked a Senate vote, he said.

Ford said arbitrary action by federal courts in Richmond, Va., and Detroit made congressional action to curb busing necessary.

"If the courts don't get the message from the people, or from Congress in a legislative way," he added, a constitutional amendment may be necessary.

Second Coup Fails In Morocco

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II has made clear that the second abortive military coup against him in 13 months - this time apparently by his most trusted army general - will change little in his autocratic style of running Morocco.

Hassan's interior minister, Mohammed Benhima, said Friday, "I don't see why we'll change our methods because eight F5s were so crazy as to bomb us. Our actions will continue. We will follow our policies."

Benhima made the assertion after he called Gen. Mohamed Oufkir the traitor behind the jet fighter attack on the King's plane and palace Wednesday.

Oufkir, who as defense minister had held powers of martial law following the coup attempt last July against Hassan, took his own life after the latest coup failed, Benhima said.

He described it as a "traitor's suicide" and said Oufkir probably had a role in the 1971 assassination attempt.

At the same time as Benhima was suggesting the king would continue to govern with complete authority, he said a reform program begun last year would be pursued.

"We are going to distribute recovered land from now until October and thousands of farmers are going to get land," Behnima asserted. "By an additional tax, we are trying to favor the rich classes less for the benefit of the poor classes."

Ford To Limit 1973 Price Hike

DETROIT (AP) — Acting under pressure from the White House, Ford Motor Co. announced today that it would limit the price increase of 1973 model cars to $59—the same limit announced earlier by General Motors Corp.

Ford previously had announced an average $92 increase and GM a $90 boost. Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. still are clinging to previously announced increases of about $110 and $180 per car respectively.

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, acting on President Nixon's orders, asked the car makers earlier this week to reduce or withdraw their requests for price boosts.

Rumsfeld said Friday he hoped Ford would withdraw the increase completely.

"Obviously, we hope that Ford will make a decision to withdraw its request to the Price Commission," he said, adding that such a move could force the other three automakers into line for competitive reasons.

Rumsfeld had said he was waiting for an answer from Ford before making a final decision on efforts to get the automakers to cut the increases.

Ford's cutback amounted to an average of $33 per car; GM's to $31.

Republicans Make Fortress Of Hotel

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republicans have taken over one of Miami Beach's fanciest hotels for $100,000 and turned it into a fortress. Guards to the left, guards to the right, guards in the hallways and guards outside.

The only thing lacking at the 17-floor Doral Hotel is a moat.

Security is tight enough to guard a president, but President Nixon isn't staying there during next week's Republican National Convention. His wife and daughters will be a few doors away at the bigger, flashier Fontainebleau.

To get into the Doral you must show a badge. To walk around, you must be escorted. Incredulous newsmen asked the reason. The answer was that the Committee for the Re-election of the President needs privacy and, anyway, an escort would get one to the right people quicker.

One newsman, being escorted to the hotel sales manager's office, was stopped eight times to show identification. So was the escort, an official of the committee.

Ann Dore, who handles press relations for the re-election committee, joked today that she couldn't get into the hotel after leaving it Friday night.

"We had our first day, yesterday, our security people very excited about their new jobs," she said and then announced that the entire lower and upper lobbies would be opened.

A month ago, when Democratic presidential hopefuls and their staffs were here, the Doral was headquarters for Sen. George McGovern. A happy informality reigned—kids in sunsuits, tieless staff members and a lot of bustling.

McGovern had three floors for himself and his staff.

The Republicans took over the whole hotel—420 sleeping rooms at $30 to $80 a night, ballrooms that can seat 1,300, Starlight Roof, Iberian Conference Rooms, the Spanish Court Yard and all the things the Doral advertises as "facilities in the sun." The latter includes the hotel's private stretch of Atlantic Ocean.

"It's a new concept for us, too," said David Johnson, the Doral's general sales manager. "It's very difficult to empty a hotel for a specific group." And, he added, somewhat wistfully, it's just as hard to fill it again after the big show.

Platform Points Given

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Following are main points of the defense and foreign affairs sections of the proposed platform that will be submitted to the Republican National Convention Tuesday:

—Full backing of President Nixon's terms for the Indochina war.

—No amnesty for draft dodgers and deserters.

—A strong defense establishment, rejecting deep cuts in aircraft and missile programs, naval strength and troops in Europe.

—An all-volunteer armed force and a goal of ending the draft by mid-1973.

—Continued help to Israel to prevent any military imbalance, and efforts to bring the contending Middle East states to the conference table.

—Followups to Nixon's efforts at improving relations with the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, but also close cooperation with Taiwan, Japan and NATO allies.

Nixon To Receive Report From Kissinger Tonight

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Nixon receives a report from Henry Kissinger tonight on the foreign affairs adviser's quick around-the-world trip, a journey which kindled speculation about possible movement in the Vietnam peace talks.

The White House said Kissinger would fly to the Camp David presidential retreat for the dinner meeting with Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers following his late afternoon return to the United States from the Paris-to-Saigonto-Tokyo trip.

In Saigon, Nixon's assistant for national security affairs met for six hours with South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu. What they discussed was not disclosed, but their meetings came after Kissinger held another of his secret talks in Paris with North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho.

After leaving Saigon, Kissinger stopped in Tokyo to iron out arrangements for Nixon's Aug. 31-Sept. 1 summit in Hawaii with Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

While Nixon was awaiting Kissinger's return, he worked in the seclusion of the Catoctin Mountain compound on the acceptance speech he will give next Wednesday after the Republican National Convention nominates him for a second term.

In Washington, the White House fueled lingering debate over an allegedly missed chance for peace with a new attack Friday on Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver.

Eagleton Requests Death Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Tom Eagleton, D-Mo., has asked the Pentagon for an explanation of the collapse and death of an Army recruit during a training march at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

Eagleton said Thursday that informal accounts have alleged the four and a half mile march was conducted Aug. 2 under "tortuous conditions."

The recruit was Stephen P. Gasser, Madison, Wis.

Committee Inspects 6 Jails

Scott County Jail Inspection Committee observed six jails throughout the county on Aug. 8 in order to prepare its annual report on jail conditions and make recommendations for improvements.

The committee consists of Robert Suchman of Sikeston, chairman; Mrs. John Marshall of Sikeston, secretary; and Mrs. R. A. Arnold of Scott City. The three- member committee inspected jails in Sikeston, Benton, Illmo, Scott City, Chaffee and Oran.

Inspection of the Sikeston city jail was first made at the old location on North Prairie Street, where all facilities were reported as "very poor and inadequate". A second inspection was made after the jail was moved to its new location on North New Madrid Street, where facilities and conditions were found quite adequate.

The committee recommended personal counseling services for prisoners and also that the food budget be opened to inspection by the committee to improve the inadequate diet of two sandwiches a day and coffee.

The county jail at Benton was under complete reconstruction at the time of the committee's first inspection. A second inspection brought reports of "clean and well- lit cells, individual plumbing, community shower room, laundry room, clothing furnished for inmates while in confinement, visitors lounge and reading room, work release program, separation of juveniles, hardened criminlals and women, modern kitchen facilities and food service with balanced menus, adequate bedding, an intercom system leading to the deputy sheriff's quarters next door, and plans for an area to be used for outdoor exercise."

The committee's one recommendation was that personal counseling services be made available to the inmates.

An inspection of the Illmo city jail revealed that all facilities were clean and had adequate plumbing and sleeping quarters. The food was found to come from a local restaurant and consisted of a balanced diet. The report said, however, the jail does not provide adequate custodial security for a violent criminal. Checking past records, it was found the jail does not have more than 12 holdovers per year. Problem criminals are taken to the county jail in Benton, and the committee recommended that this policy should be continued.

Although the Scott City jail has been remodeled to contain two adequate cells, prisoners must be escorted to the bathroom by the marshal. The committee recommends that if funding can be made available, the entire facility should be brought up to date for the protection of its citizens and, when necessary, that hardened criminals be transported to the county jail in Benton, although this requires the marshal to be out of town for a period of time.

After three inspections of both the Chaffee and Oran city jails, both facilities showed no change and conditions remained "extremely poor." The committee has recommended that both jails be closed. The county jail in Benton, 10 miles away, has volunteered facilities for the few prisoners who would be imprisoned.

Ann Landers

Plants Need Sweet Talk

Dear Ann Landers: Last month I was 40 pounds overweight but I am losing a half a pound every day and will keep at it until I am down to where I ought to be. My story might help someone else, so please print it.

I weighed 117 when I married in 1955. I don't know how it happened but I kept putting on a little here and a little there, usually after pregnancies. Three weeks ago I was horrified when the scales registered 157 pounds! I went to my doctor and asked for some pills. He said nothing doing, insisted on a physical examination, found no organic problem and handed me a diet.

He then asked if I did much cocktailing, if I ate between meals, and what my favorite foods were. When I told him I eat less than anybody in the family he replied, "I hear that all the time." Then he instructed me to carry a pencil and paper for three days and write down everything I put into my mouth, even chewing gum. I thought this was crazy but I did it and it provided the key to the mystery.

I ate only a small bowl of cereal for breakfast, plus a cup of coffee and a piece of buttered toast. But then I found myself writing down, "Finished Tom and Maria's cereal --- just a few spoonfuls . . .Finished John's toast --- half a slice ... Finished Nora's bacon and eggs..."

Dinner was interesting. While preparing the chicken soup I ate a dumpling and a half-cup of noodles. Before I finished the salad, I had put away half an avocado and several "tastes" of salad dressing. I sampled the whipped-cream frosting on the cake and ate just a snidge of fudge sauce. After dinner I finished Maria's soup, Tom's salad and Julie's dessert.

It soon became clear that it wasn't what I was eating at meals that had made me fat, but tasting and finishing up the left-overs on everybody else's plates. Now that I know the facts, I've put an imaginary padlock on my mouth while cooking and cleaning up. It works like a charm.

Great? You'd better believe it, Ann. I feel light as a feather because victory is in sight. --- Former Blimp in Bethesda.

Dear Feather: Bravo. And now, all you overweight readers who "don't eat anything," take a lesson.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote to you a few years ago to say my plants were dying. Then I told you my neighbor explained the reason. She said I didn't speak to them nicely, and their feelings were hurt.

I thought she was nuts, until she showed me how beautifully her plants were flourishing. I concluded there must be something to it and decided to give it a try. Well, Ann, ever since I've started to talk to my plants they've been thriving.

I kept this secret to myself for two years but now I am reading about florists and botanists all over the country who are having fantastic success after speaking to their plants, so I thought I would write again. This morning I read an article about a botanist who proved in an experiment that if you talk mean to a violet, it can faint.

I feel less like a fool now and I hope you will print this letter.------Green Thumb Thelma

Dear Thelma: My florist in Chicago says all plants, to keep healthy, need varying degrees of light, water and heat. When I asked him if he spoke to his plants, he replied, "Only when they speak to me first."

HAVE YOU HEARD WHAT'S HAPPENING AT

CROWLEY'S RIDGE RESORT?

Mrs. Terry Vaughn Lape

—Lape-Greene—

DEXTER — Wedding vows were exchanged by Sandra Kay Greene and Terry Vaughn Lape last Saturday at 4 p.m. with the Rev. Stanley Land officiating at the double- ring ceremony in First Christian Church.

White majestic daisies and orchid pompoms were used in church decorations. Pews were decorated with sprays of fern tied with orchid satin ribbon.

Bob Williamson of Sikeston, organist, played a medley of wedding selections before the ceremony and accompanied Mrs. Barbara Shirey of Oran as she sang, "The Wedding Song", and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Greene, Kenton Road in Dexter, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Lape of Sikeston Route Three.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal - length gown of sheerganza and Chantilly lace. The neckline was enhanced with a ruffled collar of sheer organza. The long, sheer sleeves with ruffled cuffs provided the touches for a Victorian look. A Chantilly lace pinafore, with ruffles on each side and over the shoulder created an apron effect.

A three-tiered, floor-length veil of English illusion was attached to her large, organdy, brimmed hat with a crown of flowers. Flowers were repeated on the streamers down the back. She carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and a white orchid.

Miss Rhonda Mason of Overland was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Bird of Matthews and Miss Linda Greene, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore gowns of orchid cotton overlaid with matching organza. They were fashioned with a high, lace-trimmed neckline and long, sheer sleeves that were edged with Venice lace. The lace was repeated on the bodice to give a pinafore effect. Wide ruffled flounces at the hemlines completed the gowns.

Their headpieces were large, white, picture hats laced with orchid ribbon. They carried white, garden baskets filled with fern, white daisies and orchid pompoms.

Karen Dean of Caruthersville, cousin of the bride was flower girl. She wore a dress of orchid organza over taffeta with puff sleeves and touches of Venice lace.

She wore a headpiece of orchid flowers and streamers and carried a white organza and lace basket filled with orchid petals.

Larry Greene, Jr., of Sikeston, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer and wore an Eton suit of navy blue.

Danny Lape of Sikeston, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were David Lape and Ken Lape, brothers of the groom. Ushers were Don Broughton of Shelbina and Rich Barrett of Mound City.

The bride's mother wore an ensemble of sheer, blue, silk organza, matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother wore a dress of mint-green organza, green accessories and a white cymbidium orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church. Silver candlelabras with white tapers and orchid flowers were used on the bride's table which held the four-tiered wedding cake.

Serving were Mrs. Berneda Green of Sikeston, sister-in-law of the bride; Claudine Green of Malden, aunt of the bride, Betty Hester of Bloomfield and Linda Garner of Dexter.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the groom's parents Aug. 11 at Ramada Inn near Sikeston.

Sikeston Entries Eliminated

PARMA — Hayti, Poplar Bluff and Dexter joined the host club as the four semifinalists in the first annual Southeast Missouri Little League championship tournament, after two Sikeston entries failed to make the grade, along with Hornersville Friday night. Twenty teams began play last Sunday for the coveted honor.

Tonight's semifinal pairings match Hayti against Parma at 6:30 and Poplar Bluff battling Dexter at 8 p.m.

Hayti outslugged Hornersville 9-6 in Friday's opening battle and Poplar Bluff posted a 7-5 decision over the Sikeston All-Stars before Dexter eliminated the Sikeston Aces 5-4 with a run in the bottom of the sixth.

Wayne Dodson paced an eight-hit Hayti attack with two key singles while battling in the seventh spot in the lineup and picked up four RBI's to back Mike Thomas' seven-hit pitching.

Hornersville pounded out seven hits, including a double by Larry Bibbs and tripes by Bill Kackley and Larry Etheridge, but failed to connect at the appropriate time after spotting their opponents a 5-0 lead in the second inning.

Poplar Bluff rallied from a 5-4 deficit with three big runs in the last of the fifth frame to race ahead of Sikeston's best offerings. Larry Hit went three for three at the plate for the Junior Raiders, ripping a double, along with Johnny Taylor, and a triple off the bat of winning hurler Mike Lynch.

Ivory Joe David and Mike Buchanan slugged out two hits apiece to head Sikeston's eight-hit barrage. Buchanan connected for a triple to start the All-Stars big fifth frame.

A leadoff walk in the sixth inning and some wild pitching led to Sikeston Aces' elimination from further action in the coveted event. The walked runner eventualy crossed the plate with the deciding run after both clubs had battled in a 4-4 tie since the bottom of the third.

Mike Espey and Larry Gordan collected two hits each to lead Dexter's five-hit attack, while Bruce Hyslop checked Sikeston on six hits and retired 11 of the last 12 men he faced.

NCAA Hands Out Penalties

BOSTON (AP) — The University of Kansas, Duke and Eastern Michigan were placed on the National Collegiate Athletic Association's one-year probation list today while the University of California looked forward to getting off the penalty roles earlier than some expected.

The powerful policy-making council of the NCAA censured and handed stiff penalties to Kansas, Duke and Eastern Michigan Friday in the windup of week-long NCAA meetings.

California, placed on indefinite suspension for violations of the 1.6 academic code last August, satisfied the NCAA it has been operating under the minimum regulation since last Feb. 1. The council imposed a one-year probation retroactive to that date.

Kansas was censured and placed on two years probation by its Big Eight Conference in October, 1970. The NCAA made its own investigation and included other alleged rule violations which were "washed out."

The NCAA handed down its decision against Kansas for many violations, including such minor infractions as providing athletes theatre discount cards.

The most serious charges against Kansas included one that a former assistant football coach certified two players as eligible under the 1.6 academic rule "on the basis of fraudulent high school ranks." Other violations involved recruiting, financial aid and ethical conduct.

The NCAA ordered that Kansas' football, basketball and track teams be barred from post-season competition during the probationary period. The football team also is banned from participation in NCAA controlled television programs.

California originally was penalized for violation of the 1.6 rule for permitting track star Isaac Curtis and football tight end Larry Brumsey to compete. Both since have left the university.

Duke was censured for violating recruiting rules, mainly in entertaining and transporting prospective student athletes. However, only the basketball team will be barred from postseason play next spring.

Eastern Michigan was reprimanded for violating several NCAA rules governing financial aid to students, ethical conduct in which a basketball player hit an opponent, and the academic regulation involving five players.

Eastern Michigan's teams in basketball, baseball, track and wrestling were declared ineligible for post-season play next year.

Durham Backs Win With HR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "He was a first baseman and they made him a pitcher—I think I'll put him back at first," is St. Louis Cardinals' manager Red Schoendienst tribute to rookie pitcher Don Durham.

Schendienst, of course, was kidding. Durham, a 23-year-old right hander from Yosemite, Ky., doesn't do too badly on the mound either, as evidenced by his 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night.

Durham, who had dropped his first five major league decisions since being promoted from Tulsa last month, was a virtual one-man gang with a home run, a single and two runs scored.

Durham, now 1-5, entered the seventh with a four-hitter and a 2-1 lead before Diego Segui took over and pitched 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief for his sixth save.

"The home run was incidental to the win," declared Durham. "Believe me, getting my first major league win is my biggest thrill ever. It's especially sweet after that rugged 0-5 start.

"I had a few tough breaks in my previous games," he says, "but I felt a lot of stronger tonight. The cooler weather here helped me. I felt loose and wasn't sapped of my strength."

Durham who batted .418 his final season at Western Kentucky University as a pitcher— first baseman, singled in the third inning and scored on Ted Sizemore's single.

He homered off loser Jim Willoughby, 2-1, in the fifth, giving him a string of five straight hits, including his second major league homer. Durham forced a runner in the seventh, dropping his average to .556.

"The homer didn't really surprise me," the rookie offered. "It was a hanging slider and I was looking for it. I never was a power hitter, but I did have one homer at Tulsa this season." aSegui, who was bypassed by the Giants on the waiver list before joining St. Louis from the Oakland A's, worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh and retired eight of the 10 batters he faced.

"I was lucky, but it's better to be lucky than good sometimes," said Segui. "It's tough in this league because there are so many artificial turfs. Anything hit into the ground has a chance."

The Giants, who played the Cardinals in the second game of the series today, had few bright spots. Ken Henderson extended his batting streak to 15 games with a run-scoring single in the sixth.

Conservation Meeting At Ramada Sept. 11

State Rep. Fred E. (Gene) Copeland of New Madrid today announced that the Missouri Conservation Commission would hold public hearings in Sikeston next month to receive suggestions and complaints regarding wildlife practices.

Copeland had requested that the commission depart from its normal meetings schedule to hold a public forum in Southeast Missouri. He said hunters and fishermen seldom have the opportunity to voice their opinions directly to the Conservation Commission, and he felt this was a need which should be met.

Advance notice is not required in order to testify at the hearing, which Copeland said would be held at 10 a.m. Monday, Sept. 11, at Ramada Inn near Sikeston.

"People who are strongly interested in hunting, fishing and conservation have definite ideas of their own about wildlife management and hunting seasons," Copeland said, "and I particularly have heard many suggestions about the rules and regulations for waterfowl.

"This public hearing provides a rare opportunity to be heard, and it was arranged for just that purpose. I hope all Southeast Missourians who are concerned about conservation topics will plan to attend and make their feelings known."

Cotton Meeting Set

BLOOMFIELD — A Cotton Insect Scouting Meeting will be held next Wednesday on the James Ross farm near Essex, beginning at 9:30 a.m., it was announced by the University Extension Center.

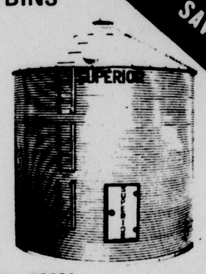

The purpose of this meeting is to teach farmers how to scout their cotton fields for bollworm and boll weevil. Procedure for scouting a field for these pests, how to determine when a field should be sprayed, and recommended control measures will be domonstrated and discussed. Flernoy Jones, extension area entomology, specialist from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville, will be present to assist with this meeting.

Boll weevil are building up in some cotton fields on and along the eastern edge of Crowley's Ridge, and bollworm problems can be expected to begin at any time.

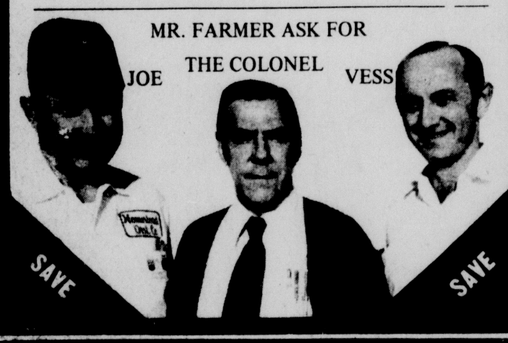

On the other hand, high numbers of beneficial insects are being found in all cotton fields. Consequently, it is important cotton fields be watched carefully, but that insecticides be applied only when necessary. This meeting is being held to assist farmers along this line.

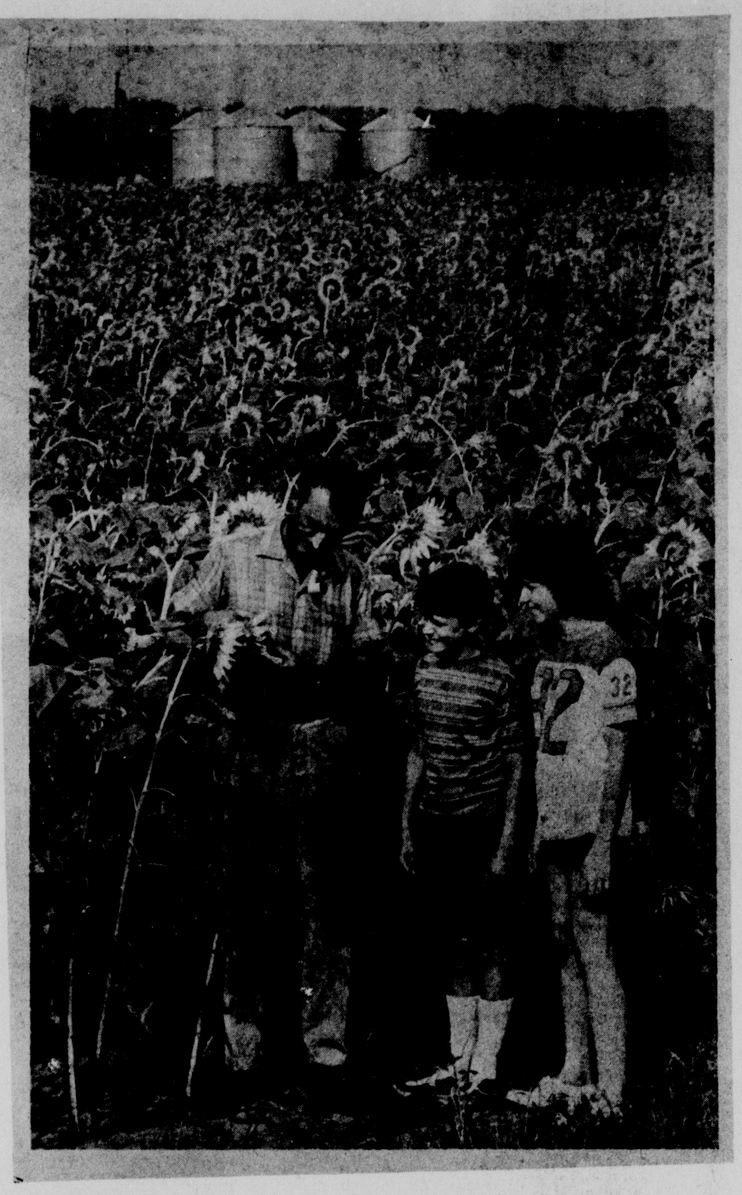

The field in which this meeting will be held is located on the north side of Highway 60 approximately four miles east of the Highway 60-Highway 25 junction and one mile west of the Essex junction.

MISSISSIPPI COUNTY FARMERS this year are planting sunflowers on layout ground for the first time. Over 275 acres of sunflowers have been planted on layout ground in the county, with the United States Department of Agriculture deducting $9.10 per acre from payments made to farmers for set-aside. Wallace Peebles, left, of Pinhook shows his daughter, Katy, right, and Bradley Marshall of New Orleans, La., a portion of the 30 acres he has planted. The blossoms turn away from the sun until they wilt,then droop to the east as the seeds dry.

Continue To Check Fields For Insects

By
THOMAS A BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Grain sorghum producers should continue to watch sorghum fields for insect problems. Sorghum midge may do extensive damage to late-planted fields, and the corn earworm and sorghum webworm could also cause problems in sorghum fields.

Most grain sorghum fields are completely headed out now and can be considered safe as far as the midge is concerned. In spite of the fact that most of these fields have apparently escaped midge damage, late-planted fields that are beginning to head out could be heavily damaged and should be watched very closely for this tiny, orange- bodies, gnat- like insect.

Fields should be sprayed when one or more adult midges per head can be found. Spray applications should be timed so that the first is applied at approximately 50 per cent head emergence and the second applied three to five days later or by the time 90 per cent of the heads have emerged. Two applications will be needed unless the field is very uniform in head emergence. Insecticides recommended for midge control include ethyl parathion, ethion, trithion or diazinon.

Some small, corn earworms are being found in grain sorghum, and more can be expectd in sorghum fields as corn matures and earworms move to other crops. Small earworms may hollow out sorghum grain, and large worms will eat entire grains. An average of one worm per head may cause up to six per cent loss, while an average of two worms per head may cause up to ten per cent grain loss.

Controls should be applied when there is an average of one to two half- grown or smaller worms per head depending upon expected yield potential. Use the lower rate of infestation for fields that are expected to yield 5,000 pounds of grain or more per acre and the higher rate for fields that are expected to yield 2,500 to 3,500 pounds per acre.

Insecticides recommended for earworm control include toxaphene, carbaryl (Sevin) or mevinphos (Phosdrin) per acre. Tight- headed varieties of sorghum are more likely to be infested with earworms than loose- headed varieties.

Sorghum webworms are usually most severe on late-planted sorghum. These worms eat the kernels of ripening grain often destroying all of the grain in the head. Severe infestations may almost completely destroy a crop if not controlled.

Webworms are sluggish caterpillars that are somewhat flattened and thickly clothed with hairs. They are about one-half inche in length when full gown. The body is greenish-tan wit four reddish- brown stripes down the back.

To determine whether or not a field should be sprayed, determine the average number of worms per head and the averatge distance between sorghum heads in inches. At average distances between heads of four, six, eight, 12 and 16 inches, spray when three, four, five, eight, and 10 worms respectively are found. Insecticides recommended for conr earworm control are also recommended for webworm control.

Additional information pertaining to insect control in grain sorghum may be obtained upon request at any county University Extension Center.

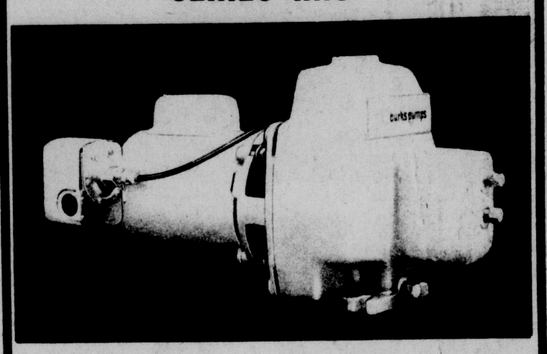

Grass Control Field Day Set

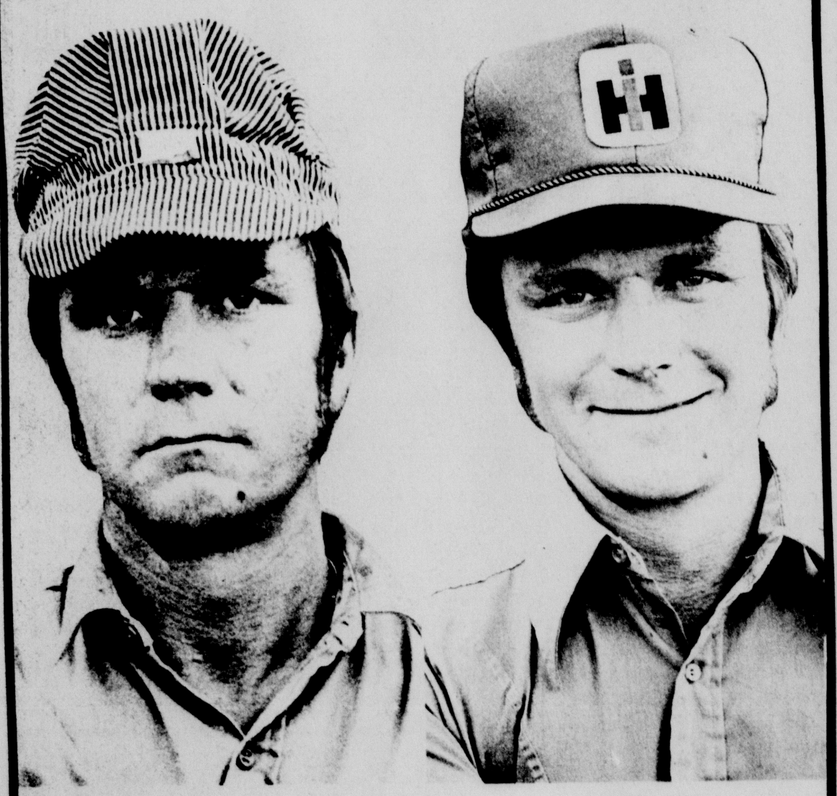

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Farmers in the Southeast Missouri and the Bootheel area are invited to attend a Johnsongrass Control Field Day Tuesday, Aug. 29, on the R. B. Potashnick land on Highway 74 west of Cape Girardeau. Most of the treatments involved here been the thio- carbamates and combinations of seed protectants, and triazines, and the thio-carbamates.

This field day is a cooperative effort of Stauffer Chemical Company and the University of Missouri Extension Division. A free lunch will be provided for all those who attend.

Activities will begin at 10 a.m. Speakers will include Dr. Harold Kerr, weed scientist from the Delta Research denter; Joe Scott, extension agronomist, Delta Research Center; Duaine Kief, research and development, Stauffer Chemical Company; and Elmer Peetz, farmer from Cape Girardeau.

Since the Williams - Steiger Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (OSHA) went into effect, all agricultural employers who employ one or more persons have been covered by the law.

Cotton Featured In Field Day

PORTAGEVILLE -- New and recommended production systems for cotton will be shown and discussed Sept. 7 during the annual Field Day of the Delta Research Center near here. Old standby systems and new experimental systems will be shown as comparisons.

In addition to cotton, field day visitors will see grain sorghum variety and fertilizer rate tests, soybean variety and row- spacing tests and corn insect control tests.

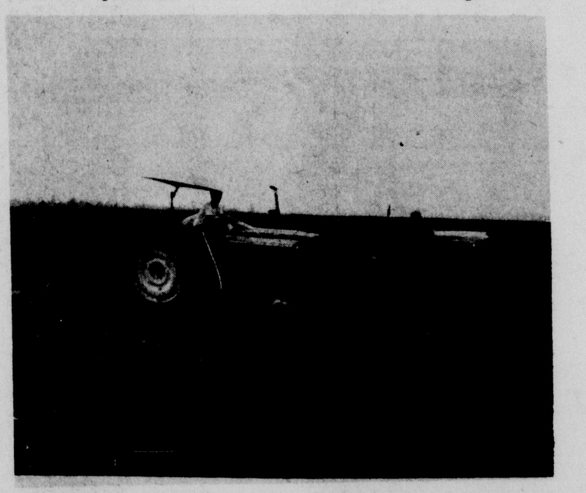

The tour wagons will start their trips around the Lee Farm at 9 a.m. Tours will end between noon and 1 p.m. Lunch will be available.

Lee Farm is located seven miles southeast of Portageville at the intersection of Routes T and TT. It is the largest of several outlying research farms operated by the Delta Research Center, an area center of the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Dr. Norman Brown, center superintendent, has urged area farmers, growers, producers, and agribusinessmen to attend the field day so that all may benefit from the researchers' efforts.

He points out that the cotton studies are very thorough. The tours, he said, will show research into cotton plant populations, varieties, fertilizer rates, fungicides, row spacing and soil types. They also will show the use of chemicals on cotton to control weeds and growth habits and to aid harvest.

Researchers will be on hand to answer questions.

JIM SCHERER, right, and his son Joe, both of Bell City, turn under soybeans for green manure. The beans were sowed with a wheat drill and put down at the rate of two bushels per acre. The beans were an average of three feet high when turned under. Scherer farms one and one- half miles east of Hunter's Gin on Route Y in Stoddard County eight miles southeast of Bell City. Aug. 15 was the deadline for turning under soybeans on set- aside ground.

Find New Objects At Hayti Indian Site

Editors Note:

Southeast Missouri archeology has never been given the sort of publicity that it deserves, especially in southeast Missouri. It was just two weeks ago that The Daily Standard first published an article about a newly found Indian site near Hayti. It is not uncommon for a newspaper to run an account like this; but usually, even if the find proves to be important, there is little follow-up work done in the paper.

This week, The Daily Standard is publishing the first of a series of monthly articles about sites, techniques and the history of archeology in the SeMo region. The articles will be written by Daily Standard Wire Editor Tim Ludwig, collaborating with Scott Grantham, anthropology and archeology professor at Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau.

The first report is about their return to the Hayti site to explore further what was found there.

By TIM LUDWIG
AND SCOTT GRANTHAM

Just over two weeks ago, one of the construction workers on the Interstate 55 project south of Hayti accidentally uncovered what proved to be a one-of -a-kind Indian burial. Unlike normal burials in this area, which are usually in the ground with protection or in urns or pots of clay, this particular grave site contained two clay coffins.

A clay urn could be compared to a large jar, while these coffins were actually two deep trays put together face to face with the bones inside.

After excavating two of these coffins, a team sent to Hayti from University of Missouri left the site to the inevitable road machinery. We were lucky enough to work at the site a few days later, still undisturbed by road work. We set to work by starting outward from the edge of the excavation left by the MU team. Within the first few shovels full of dirt we struck our first artifacts, part of a flexed burial.

There are three main types of burial positions: flexed, bundle and normal, prone positions. Prone is the normal lying down position. Bundle is a burial done by allowing all flesh to rot or be removed from the bones, then taking the major bones (legs, arms, skull and pelvis), tying them into a bundle, then placing them in the ground.

The flexed type of burial which we found is done by breaking the main body joints and folding the body up very much like an unborn child, then placing it in the ground.

That day two other men were along to help with the digging work.

One of these, Norman Brooks, an art teacher at Cape Girardeau's Schultz School, assigned himself to the very tedious and difficult task of freeing the rotten bones from the sandy soil. The rest of us moved a few feet away and began to carefully peel back thin layers of earth to try to find more artifacts without causing any damage to them.

Almost immediately Grantham came onto a ridge line of pottery indicating one of the coffins like the MU team had found. That left Gary Tippen, a fifth grade teacher from Bloomfield, and Tim Ludwig, to again move to another area to avoid interfering with the finds the others were trying to preserve. We soon came across other pottery ridges and began to carefully remove dirt from the edges.

After about half an hour's digging, Tippen uncovered what we thought was the side of a baby's skull. He immediately set to picking away bits of dirt to try to free this important find undamaged.

The area I had picked to work over seemed to be the least promising of all. It nearly proved to be just that. After more than two hours' work, I still had not turned up anything more interesting than sand, a few hints of charcoal, and a very small handful of tiny bone chips. Finally, next to the ridge of pottery where I had been working; I found a molar. Close to this were five of what appeared to be gourd seeds and several bits of red material we think might be very old preserved flower petals.

The techniques we used to uncover and eventually remove our finds are basically well established archeological procedures. We first removed thin layers of earth by shovel. This was done with great care to avoid any damage to artifacts near the surface. When an artifact was spotted or suspected, we went to small mason's trowels to more carefully scrape away loose dirt.

The bones found at the Hayti site had deteriorated due to a high acid level in the soil of that area. They had rotted to the point of flaking into powder under any pressure. Brooks could not use just the trowel to clear the bones, so he began to work on his flexed burial with a precision direction set. His skill as an archelogical surgeon should be obvious from the accompanying photograph.

We were able to salvage the remaining parts of the burial by removing the entire slab of earth in which it was set.

Grantham, as the only true expert in our group, was kept busy hopping back and forth answering questions and making sure that none of us amateurs destroyed anything of value. He did manage to completely outline another ridge of pottery and define the coffin shape it gave.

My few seeds and bits of petal were all for me, so I watched and tried to learn.

All of us were fascinated with Tippen's progress on the baby skull. It didn't seem to have the rottenness of the other bones we had found. In fact, the more of it he exposed, the more it looked like carved stone. It proved to be the find of the day: an effigy pipe. This type of pipe was used in religious and funeral ceremonies and had great importance in the life of the Indians.

We were able to spend only two and one half hours at the site that first day and by the time we returned three days later, the road machines had taken our place. It was a disappointment, but we decided to try a spot a few hundred yards up the ditch bank from where we had been. Again, almost with the first shovelfull we hit archeological gold.

This time it was a beam from the ceiling of an Indian dwelling. The wood was burned to charcoal and, using the black over brown soil color as a guide, was lying barely two inches above floor level. Grantham explained that this may have been an abandoned house that was burned by its users to free the family spirits buried with the family skeletons under the floor.

Grantham also found what might prove to be a village midden or trash dump.

The parts of this site we and the MU team were able to work on are now back underground due to he necessary progress of our interstate highway system. There are other sites like this one that have been or will be discovered in the highway path and then covered over. However, these are only a very small part of the large amount of sites on Southeast Missouri land.

Many sites are known and have been catalogued by the Missouri Archeological Survey for possible future work. Many other sites are found each year during plowing times on many of the farms in this area. Too many of these sites which might be important are not seen because no one is asked to check their value to Missouri's history.

One of the purposes of this column is to "spread the word," that there is an interest in SeMo's ancient history, and that there are people nearby who are ready to try to determine the value of these finds. If any of our readers know of or have on their land a suspected site, or have found a few artifacts such as arrowheads and bits of pottery, and would like to have these finds investigated, you may contact Tim Ludwig at The Daily Standard in Sikeston, or Scott Grantham at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

NEW ARTIFACTS turned up at the Interstate 55 Indian site near Hayti were several and fascinating. The skull in the bottom picture is part of a flexed burial excavated by Norm Brooks. The dissecting scalpel in Brooks' hand was necessary to delicately scrape away the sandy earth from the rotten and powdery bones. The large white block in the picture on the right is an effigy pipe found by Gary Tippen. This pipe was probably used in important religious ceremonies. The photo on the left shows a human molar and five suspected gourd seeds found by Tim Ludwig. Scott Grantham, archaeology and anthropology professor at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau watched over the digging to be sure nothing was damaged.

THE MAN WHO CONFOUNDS ESTABLISHED POLITICAL POLLSTERS

In 1968 Washington Correspondent Bruce Biossat correctly forecast the outcome of most primary campaigns, both conventions and the final presidential choice—all without the aid of computer or staff, confounding all of the established pollsters. Be informed—follow Biossat regularly in this newspaper.

Michael J. Howlett, state Auditor of Public Accounts, believes safe drivers should be rewarded by their insurance companies as bad drivers are now penalized. A driver with no conviction of moving violations during the previous three years is issued a safety citation with his driver's license renewal, but he pays the same insurance premium as beginners or recent migrants to Illinois who have no record of driving experience. "As Secretary of State, I would continue to issue a citation to the good driver to carry in his wallet, but I would add another that he could send to his insurance company," Howlett said. "I would use the prestige of the Secretary's office to try to persuade the insurance industry of the advantages of a preferred rate for outstanding drivers." Howlett said he would also issue a decal sticker to the safe driver to put in the rear window of his car as an additional incentive to keep his record clean.

ART IS THERAPY for Eduardo Castrillo of Manila. Working with a team of assistants who are school dropouts and former narcotics addicts, the 28-year-old Filipino sculptor is creating a 32-foot-tall "The Last Supper" depicting Christ offering bread and wine to the apostles. Castrillo chose his helpers on the brass and steel work, which will take two years to complete, because "I want to give them my art. Whatever they learn will have my imprint."

Cocktail Party Or Tribal Feast

THE YAM FACTOR. By Martin Page. Doubleday. 293 Pages. $7.95.

Here is a critique, from an odd viewpoint, of the whole world of corporate executives and their idiosyncrasies, constructed by showing parallels between the executives and the primitive tribesmen of Africa, India and the islands of the Pacific.

In a typical chapter titled "Me Management Consultant, You Witch Doctor," the author makes the point that both types tell their customers what they want to hear. And he finds tribal equivalents for such people as advertising men and stock market traders.

He also borrows from tribal lore many examples of what business executives can do about promotions and demotions and the drifting from one job to another; the ins and outs of picking a successor; the motivations of salesmen; the comparable status symbols and upmanship.

The title, incidentally, has to do with a custom of the Trobriand Islands. A man who wants to show off his standing in the world does it mostly through his wife; a business executive decks his wife with jewels and minks, but plays down his own image, so that people will think he is indulging in "a rich man's whim."

Perhaps Page has overdone his thesis. He piles example upon example until it gets a bit thick.

Art Exhibit For Blind

By C. G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The "Look but don't touch" warning issued in most museums doesn't hold at the University of Illinois, where a special art exhibit designed for touching has been set up for the blind.

The exhibition in the university's Krannert Museum is aimed at acquainting blind students and other visually handicapped persons with art forms and how they change.

It includes six sculptures of various materials from the 19th and 20th centuries, set up in a separate room of the museum.

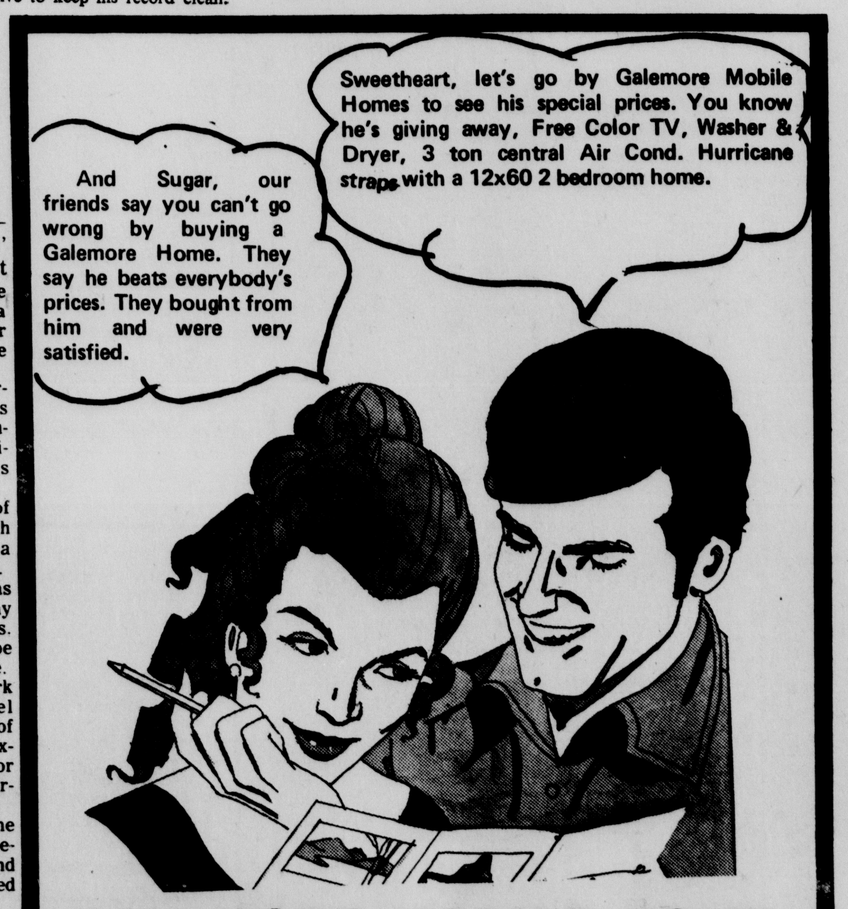

The visually handicapped as well as sighted persons may visit and feel the sculptures. Labels on each piece describe the work in print and in Braille.

The exhibition is the work primarily of Mrs. Muriel Christison, acting director of the museum, and Ronald Texley, supervisor of services for the blind and deaf at the university.

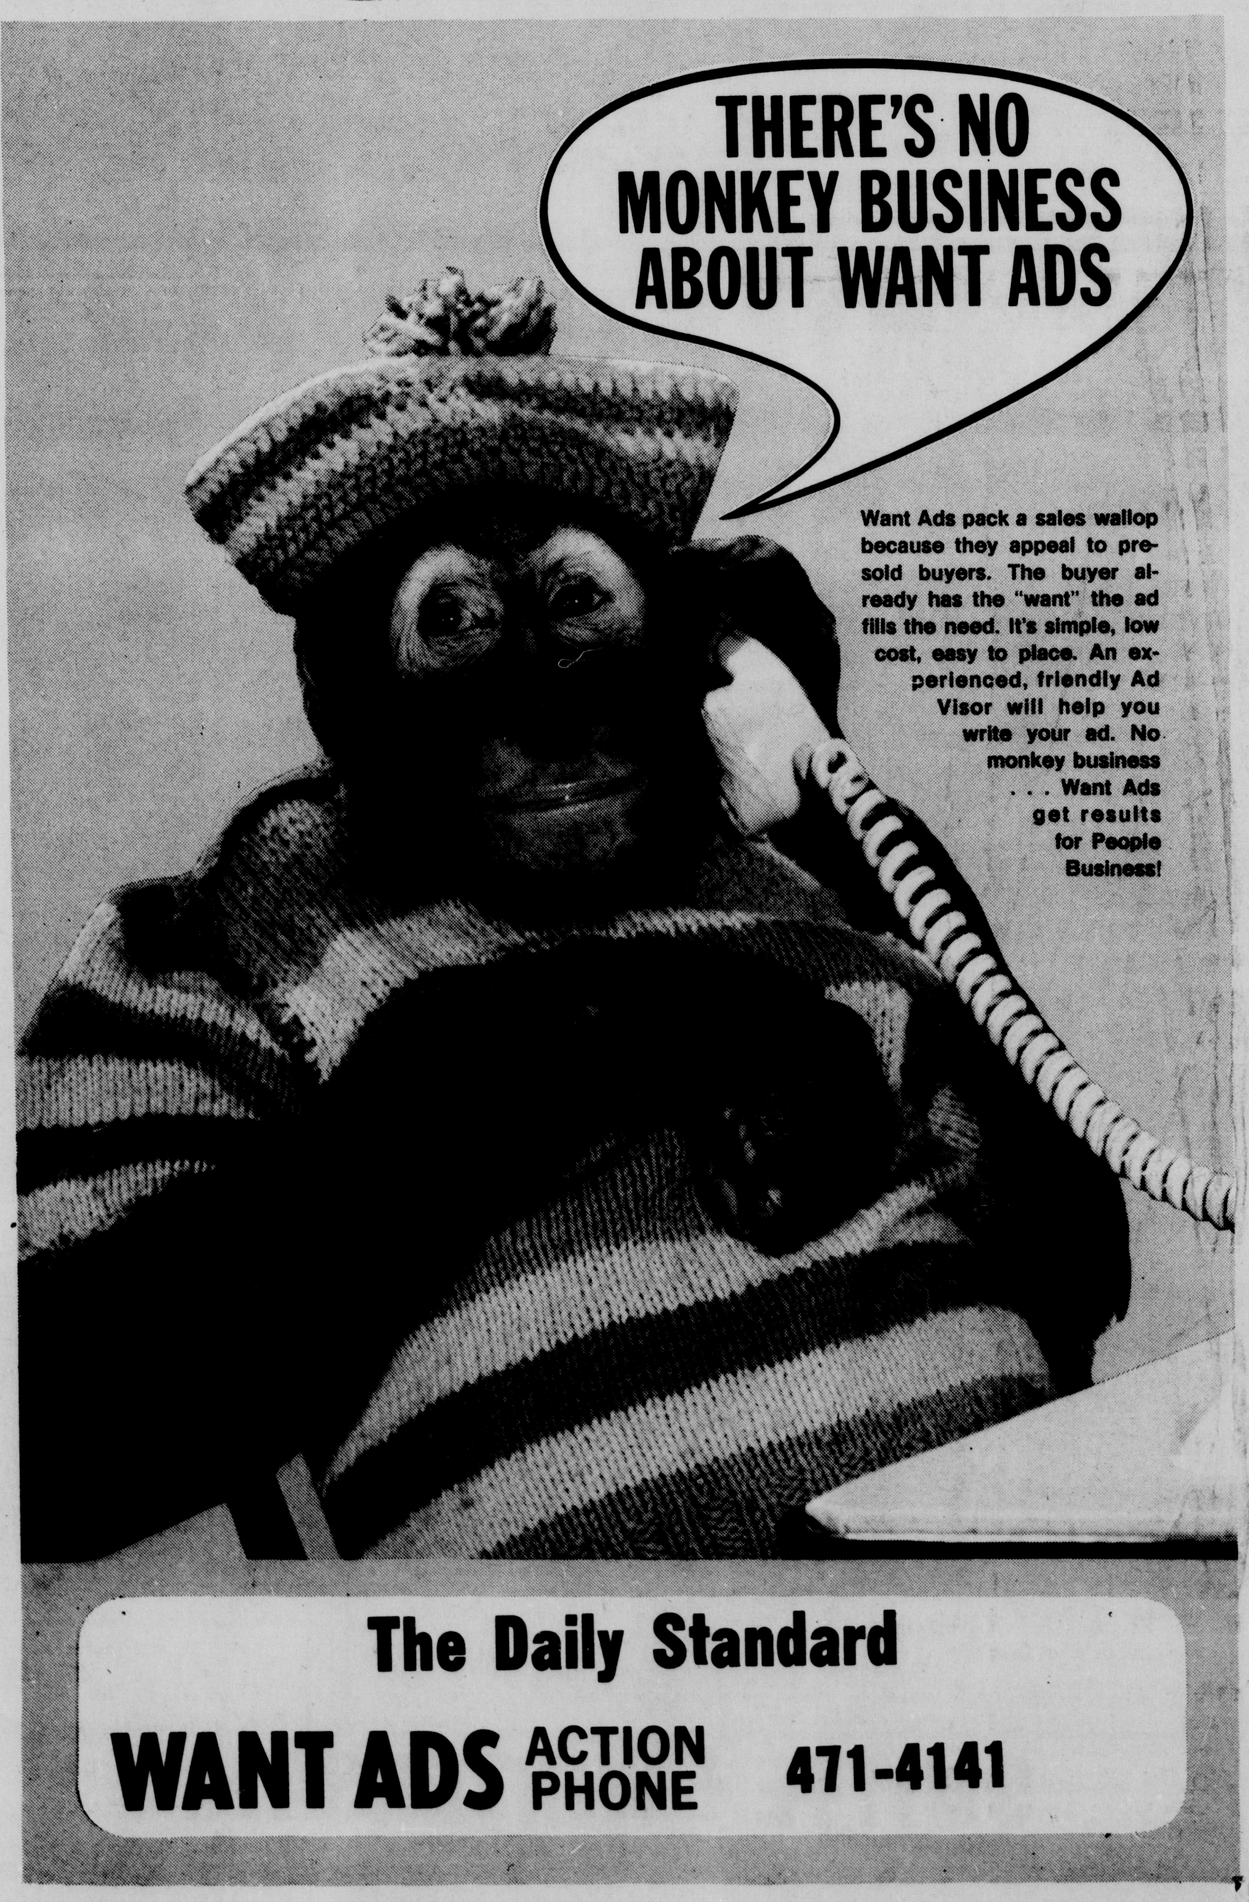

There are 35 students at the university who are termed "severely visually impaired," and about 200 visually handicapped persons in the area.

Texley said those who have seen the show like it because it gives them an opportunity to become informed about art and art forms.

The most traditional piece in the show is a white marble bust of a young woman done by Launt Thompson in 1861. It reflects the taste of marble portraiture in the Victorian era.

Old Idea Results In a New Novel

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It took author Meyer Levin a while, but he finally got around to writing the book he first planned nearly 40 years ago.

The novel, his latest work, is called "The Settlers," and deals with the flight of Jews from European oppression to Palestine in the early years of this century.

The 66-year-old Levin, best-known, perhaps, for his novels "The Old Bunch" and "Compulsion," says, "I first planned the book in 1934, and I even gave a few pages of outline to a publisher.

"But I was delayed. I didn't have the money to work at it for a long time in security as I needed. Also I felt this book should be done by someone who had lived it more, so I guess I was waiting for a Hebrew writer to do it.

"It wasn't done, and I finally got to an age where I realized that if I don't do it now I never will. The material inside me was pressing for expression.

"It's the same with any art. You get an idea or you discover a body of material and after a while it begins to work its way out of you into the form of a book, or a play, or a film. That's why I write."

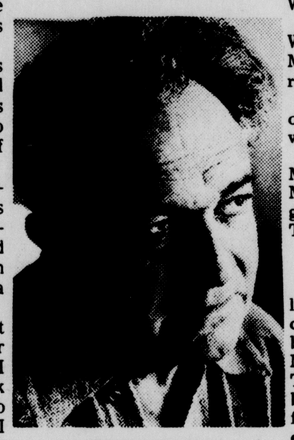

Levin, a relaxed, talkative man, says the actual writing of "The Settlers," finished late last year, took him over four years.

"Just in time," he says with a laugh. "The money I was getting from 'Compulsion' was running out, and I just made it through to this book. I got a pretty good advance for 'The Settlers,' — nothing spectacular, but I can live on it for a few years."

Although he published his first novel, "Reporter," when he was 21, Levin says he was not able to completely support himself by writing books until he was 50.

"I always had another job — journalism, lecturing," he says. "But 'Compulsion' made me enough money so that I could just do writing."

Levin used some of the money to build a home in Israel,

MEYER LEVIN

near Tel Aviv, for himself and his wife, novelist Tereska Torres. They have three children. He and his family divide their time between that home and one in New York City. Levin has a writing retreat in both places.

"I have a system when I'm working on a book that I've stuck to since the '30s," he says. "I try to get away to some quiet place for three or four days a week and stay isolated. I only can work seriously when I am alone."

"In Israel I have a place about half an hour from my home. It is very small, but I like it because it is isolated and quiet. In New York, it is the same. I have a barn out in the country and I go there to write.

"I do everything for myself, including cooking. I can take care of myself."

Comic Rodney Dangerfield 'Don't Get No Respect'

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "I don't get no respect," grumbled Rodney Dangerfield as he explained why he was a few minutes late. "You know, I got this cab driver who kept on talking to me even after I paid him."

Easing himself into the booth in the intimate Manhattan night club that bears his name, the comedian who has built the "no respect" bit into a household word observed with a wry smile that "anyone who talks like that doesn't deserve any respect."

The line and the routines built around it were created almost by accident, Dangerfield said, explaining:

"A number of years ago I was working for nothing in a club in Greenwich Village. I worked three months for nothing. Each night I'd get up on the stage and spill out everything in me to the audience. Then, one night, a funny thing happened. I told them I got no respect, and they went for it — they liked it.

"The people were sympathetic. Probably it's because we all go through the same thing. It's not easy out there in the world. There are days when nothing goes right. Everything seems to go against you. You don't get no respect."

The stint in the Village club was the easygoing Dangerfield's second try at making it as a comic.

"The first time out I was 19," Dangerfield said. "I kept at it until I was 28. I got married during that time. My wife was a singer. We were apart a lot and that was not what I really wanted. I don't like to travel to do shows. Also, a guy that age is kind of young to communicate with mature people. A talking comedian takes years to attain the maturity needed to reach mature adults. I was making a living, but I just quit."

Dangerfield's new career was as a paint salesman. "Life is funny," he grinned. "I made a living selling paint but business is boring. So all the time I kept writing material. I'd write it down and throw it in a drawer. I accumulated a lot of stuff over the years.

"I sold some of it to comedians, but I wanted to do it myself. So at 40 I started working comedy part-time. I'd sell paint during the day and go to the Village at night and try to escape into a fantasy of humor. Humor is a great art. Some men gamble, some drink, me, I go for humor."

Dangerfield, now 49, kept up the double life until he was 44 — "then I gave up paint." The chance to make the break came after he made a successful appearance on Ed Sullivan's television show and suddenly was in demand as a comic.

"You know," he reflected, "I like to try to do the impossible in life. They told me I was nuts when I went back into show business. But I made it. Then they really thought I was nuts when I opened this club of mine in bad times. But it worked and I'm doing well.

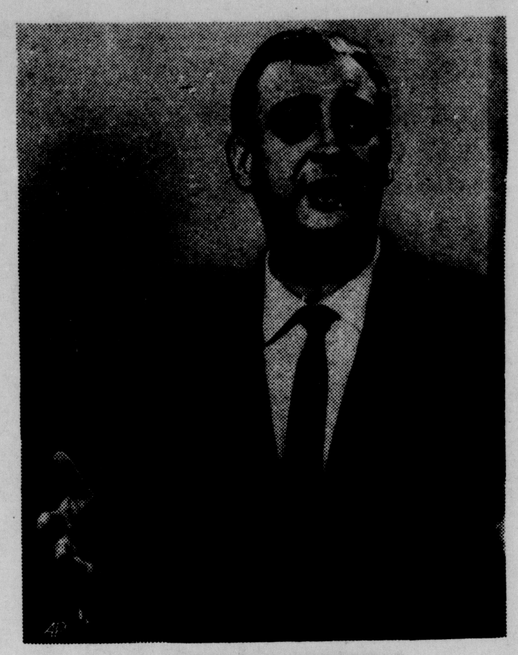

"I'd much rather be here," he continued. "I don't feel like traveling to do shows. You get to a point in your life where you get tired of traveling. Maybe I'm lazy."

Unlike some comics, Dangerfield writes his own material.

"I always think I've written my last joke," he said with a smile, "and then, boom, there's another one. But I'm a spasmodic writer. I'll be out driving or walking and I'll get hit with the idea for a joke.

"But," he cautions, "writing a joke is only a quarter of the work. The big problem is continuity. You've got to perfect routines that hang together. The jokes are just part of the routine. Laughter is a tough commodity to find these days.

"By the way, you want to hear my latest. . .?"

Show Realistic Romanticism

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Song writer Paul Williams is indulging in some fantasy in the midst of an interview. "I think I'll start a Famous Friends Agency. I'll advertise, 'This week we have Stephen Stills on special, playing guitar on your album.' "

Williams has been talking about the music business. "I think one of the nice things about the whole music scene today is that the competitiveness has been taken out of it among the musicians and writers. It seems there is all sorts of room at the top. You constantly find the top-level people turning up on each other's records and concerts. It's really healthy I think.

"It reminds me of the late 1800s in Paris where the French Impressionists influenced each other, talked about their ideas, collaborated."

Other observations Williams has to make about today's music scene is that honesty of presentation is more prized by audiences than slick professionalism and the increasing importance of the song in comparison with the singer.

Williams recently cut an album, on A & M, of his own songs, called "Just An Old Fashioned Love Song." It's No. 143 on the May 6 LP chart. He says, "Audiences have changed. They are appreciative of an honest representation of a piece of material and don't require slick professional talent. I wouldn't begin to compare myself to Art Garfunkel or, to step into another generation, to Sinatra. But I don't think you have to be that nowadays."

About songs themselves, Williams says, "I think we're finally getting back where writers have the respect for the song as an art form that they did in the 1940s. That is why I think songs are lasting once again. We're seeing standards being written by today's young writers, Kris Kristofferson, Paul Simon, the Beatles, Carole King.

"I think we're seeing a return to romanticism, which is a realistic romanticism opposed to the ;Polka Dots and Moonbeams' romanticism of the 1940s. In the '50s we had rhythm-oriented, nonmelodic music. The lyric came back when Dylan wrote about social consciousness. Then the lyric spread out and began to reflect other areas.

"I think there is room today for somebody like myself to write about love, really honestly you know, a realistic romanticism. Maintaining a relationship really IS a matter of working together day by day, though I hate to quote a lyric." Williams has quoted a line from his own "We've Only Just Begun."

He started as an actor and began writing songs instead of watching daytime TV while waiting for his agent to call. One of his first efforts was "Fill Your Heart," written with Biff Rose, which Tiny Tim recorded in 1967 on the B side of "Tiptoe Through the Tulips."

"I never did my starving as a song writer. I starved as an actor for seven years, doing a couple of pictures and a couple of commercials. But when I started writing songs, from the very first they were recorded. I wrote album cuts and B sides. Nobody knew who I was but I was paying my bills for the first time in my life, in fact making a comfortable living.

"Then I got very hungry. I thought if I can do this well with album cuts and B sides, I'll try to write hits. I finally gave up on that and went back to writing for therapeutic reasons. Then I started having hits.

"This leads me to believe that if an audience is capable of anything, it is capable of detecting dishonesty.

"You know, rainy days and Mondays really do get me down."

In the last year and a little more, Williams says, he has had eight songs do well. "We've Only Just Begun" and "Rainy Days and Mondays," recorded by the Carpenters, "Old Fashioned Love Song" by Three Dog Night and "Cried Like a Baby" by Bobby Sherman have become gold.

Other big ones have been "Out in the Country," Three Dog Night; "So Many People," Sergio Mendez and Brasil 66 "Talk it Over in the Morning," Anne Murray; "Waking Up Alone" by himself. And, since Williams listed these, Three Dog Night hit No. 10 on May 6's best-selling 45 r.p.m. chart with his "Family of Man." Williams says, "The gods have been kind to the little fellow," referring to his being not much over 5 feet tall.

Williams wrote music and lyrics on most of the songs on his own album, including "Just an Old Fashioned Love Song." However, on both the Carpenters gold singles, the music is by Roger Nichols, who is 6 feet 5. Williams says, "I think he is one of the really important composers in this country. He sits there and plays a melody again and again while I write the lyrics. He'll play it and say, 'How do you like it?' and without fail I love it."

Both Nichols and Williams are 31. Williams says, "He is two days older than I am. I gave him two days to start a melody."

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Unromantic Bull

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Farmer Brown decided to interject some romance in the lives of several of his cows and leased a bull for stud purposes. Instead of romancing his demure cows, however, the massive bull went after Farmer Brown. Snorting like a locomotive and digging his forelegs into the ground, the charging animal sent Farmer Brown flying over a pasture fence.

Upon landing, the battered farmer sued the owner of the bull for his injuries.

"He told me that critter was perfectly safe," complained Farmer Brown in court. "The fact was only my cows were safe. He didn't cast a romantic eye towards any of them."

"Because my bull went after Farmer Brown didn't prove he wasn't safe," retorted the owner. "On the contrary, his actions were like those of any other red-blooded American bull under the circumstances. After all, anybody knows that bulls have a predilection for going after people. People are frequently cowed by bulls."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the owner pay for the injuries caused Brown by his unromantic bull?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that an owner can be held responsible for knowingly leasing a vicious bull for stud purposes. In this case, observed the judge, the bull leased by Farmer Brown was far from being docile as evidenced by his hostile conduct towards Farmer Brown.

Fair Exhibitors Vie For $333,000 In Premiums

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's worth as a farm state was laid out for all to see as the state's annual fair opened.

Exhibitors began vying for more than $333,000 in premiums offered for the best in farm crops, animals and all sorts of contests, including tractor pulling.

More than $100,000 is offered in the horse show. Horse racing is fading before the mechanical madness of automobiles and motorcycles, but the Missouri Quarter Horse Association is offering $25,000 in its futurity.

The fair will run 10 days instead of the usual nine, and W. C. Askew, fair secretary, thinks there may be 5000,00 paid admissions. A record was set last year—slightly under 380,000.

The general admission fee still is $1 per person and $1 for each car. Grandstand events are free this year, except for automobile and motorcycle races. The only other extra admission price is $5 for the bacon and ham breakfast Aug. 23.

The breakfast will be in the new $70,000 picnic pavilion built this year on the 60-acre camping area which was expanded to handle 2,500 camping vehicles. There were about 10,000 visitors at the camp ground last year.

A concert by a choir of 1,000 persons and a revival service by Bob Harrington, the chaplain of New Orleans Bourbon Street, were on today's program, along with quarterhorse racing this afternoon and Grayd Ole Opry tonight.

Q—What is the world's largest flag?

A—The Old Glory displayed by Hudson's Department Store in Detroit. It is 104 by 235 feet.

Q—What British actor became a member of the House of Lords?

A—Sir Laurence Olivier.

WELL, THE KIDS SEEM to be having a good time, anyway. But then nobody ever said being an animal was exciting, whether you're a plain old working class horse in Colorado, left, or a fancy show dog named "Kuiney Klutch" in Wisconsin.

Three Sites Offered For Community Building

MALDEN — Three possible sites for a community building were presented to the City Council on Monday night by Les Heise, who is heading a committee interested in securing a community building for Malden.

Heise suggested a 400 by 300 section of ground on the southwest portion of the American Legion Addition Addition at a quoted price of $40,000; a site from Laclede Street north along Beckwith Street including the former E.C. Robinson Lumber Company property with no cost quoted; and a third possible site from Highway 25 west to Smith Street and Route J north to Downing Boulevard excluding Kraft Service Center and the MFA Service Station at a cost of $90,000. This is the Kirkbride property on which the Malden Sale Barn is located.

After discussion the Council voted to have Heise get an appraisal on the Kirkbride property and obtain a firm bid. The City would then explore the possibilities of obtaining federal aid.

Norval Wallen, representing G. H. Walker & Company bonding company of Kansas Cit, briefed the council on a possible new industry for Malden. He asked that if the industry decided to locate here that his company be given consideration when bonds are sold.

A motion to lower rates for taxi stands on the streets from $20 to $10 per month failed for lack of a second.

The council approved the employment of Andrew Richards Jr., as a member of the police department.

An ordinance vacating an alley between the Hester Addition and the Cox Addition was approved by a vote of 3-2.

However, resolutions dismissing suits against all the annexations pending now and asking the court to consider two new annexations, namely Stokes-Cohen and Gregory Southwest, were not voted on because of the lack of a quorum. There were only five council members present and one council member left before the vote was taken.

Replace State Conservation Catfish Mascot

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — There will be a new Blue at the State Fair in Sedalia Aug. 18-27.

Old Blue, a 30-pound Mississippi River catfish and the star of the state Conservation Commission exhibit for over 30 years, died last winter.

Old Blue was seen by an estimated 11 million persons.

New Blue, also weighing 30 pounds, was caught in the Osage River near Warsaw this spring.

He'll make his debut with a coyote, 15 raccoons, a red-tail fox, two possums, a red-tail hawk, several striped skunks, a bobcat and several white-tail deer.

A talking "Smokey the Bar" will also be in the exhibit.

Q—What flowers have the longest blooming period?

A—Orchids, some kinds for five weeks or more.

Q—What metal is liquid at ordinary temperatures?

A—Mercury.

Insurance Makes Gains In New Madrid County

NEW MADRID — A sign of the times, for the average New Madrid County family, is the extent to which it is protected against the financial hazards of daily living.

It had unemployment in insurance, health insurance, accident insurance and life insurance, the mention the major ones.

And, on the long-range side, it has such other bulwarks as Social Security, private pension plans and personal savings.

With respect to its life insurance protection, it is more heavily covered at the present time than it has ever been.

The result is that the capital amount of life insurance in force in New Madrid County has climbed to an estimated total of $111,727,000.

The facts and figures on the distribution of insurance, nationally and by states, are presented in the latest Life Insurance Fact Book and in other reports.

They show that the lives of Americans are insured for a tremendous sum of money, more than $1.5 trillion. And this does not include the substantial amount issued to veterans through the Federal government.

Missouri's share of this total is listed at $34,757,000,000 a big increase over the $14,922,000,000 reported 10 years ago.

Just how much does this boil down to at the family level? The findings are that the average family in the state carries an amount of insurance that is equal to 26.2 months of its net earnings, after taxes.

Applied to New Madrid County and to the average level of income prevailing in its area, ownership of life insurance comes to approximately $16,100 per family locally.

This is considerably more than in many sections of the country and is close to twice the amoung held 10 years ago.

Although ordinary life insurance continues to be the choice of most families there has been a rapid rise in group insurance, which is usually job-connected.

Q—Do earthworms have eyes?

A—Neither eyes nor ears. Sensory cells make them sensitive to light and touch.

Put Some New Life In Your Outdoor Menus. . .

Quick and Easy Menu Ideas for the "Dog Day" Are In Order.

*Salami omelette is a vacation specialty. Slowly brown cubes of salami in a skillet. Add 1 well-beaten egg per person. As edges cook, run a spatula around the edge so that uncooked portion will run to bottom. Cut in pie-shaped pieces to serve.

*Salamis differ from each other in the combination of meats, spice level, salting, curing and shape. Most salami is pork and beef. Soft salami, like kosher varieties, is air dried for a short time or not at all after cooking. Hard salami, like Italian Genoa, is seasoned with garlic and perhaps wine. Hard salamies are air dried for longer periods and are more chewy than the soft varieties.

*Skinless frankfurter pieces and pineapple chunks on a skewer are a good appetizer while the coals are getting hot for the main dish. Brush the kabobs with butter or barbecue sauce.

*Liver sausage and Muenster cheese sandwiches on rye bread served with potato salad make a no-fuss summer dinner. Fresh fruit is dessert.

*As the coals are fading after dinner, let the children pop some corn as a treat for helping clean up.

*Some barbecue clean-up hints. Line the grill with heavy-duty aluminum foil before laying a bed of gravel (for good heat circulation) and charcoal. Rub the grill with salad oil to prevent meat sticking to the bars. Keep a squirt gun or spray bottle of water on hand to douse flames and cut down on smoke.

What You Want to Know?

Q. Is it true that Richard Harris, the fine English actor who has made countless good movies, is going to star in a TV series? What will he play and when will it come on TV? — C.H., San Antonio, Tex.

A. Richard Harris has no immediate intention of starring in a TV series.

Q. I have had an argument with a friend of mine for some time now concerning Wes Stern, who plays in "Getting Together." Did Wes Stern play in a movie title "Three in an Attic"? —L.R., McSherrystown, Pa.

A. You've got the right number, but the wrong part of the house. Wes Stern, who plays Bobby Sherman's partner in "Getting Together," starried in a film titled "Three in a Cellar." However, there was a firlm titled "Three in an Attic," but it starred Christopher Jones and Yvette Mimieux.

Q. I never read much in your column about Jimmy Stewart's TV show. I watched it a few times and I have become a fan. He's so good and the show has a charm. Please print my letter so that people who haven't thought about watching the show will give it a looksee. —Mrs. Y. F., Guilderland, N.Y.

A. The reason you haven't read much about Jimmy Stewart's TV series is that yours is among the first letters we received about the show.

Q. What has become of Albert Finney? I have seen "Charlie Bubbles" on TV six times and 1 love this movie. When will Finney make another film or TV special or anything? — S.F., Paterson, N.J.

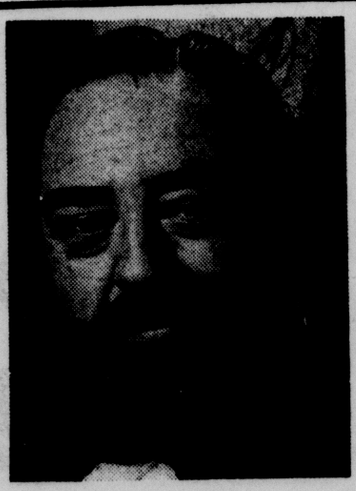

A. Albert Finney chooses his acting assignments with great care and he usually takes time off between films or plays. At the present time, he is not engaged in any film activity.

Q. My favorite new series is "Nichols" with James Garner. He's so super cool and the show is really funny. I like everything about this show, the cast, the writing and most of all, Garner. Is the show doing well in those deadly ratings?—M.F., Newtown, Conn.

A. "Nichols" registered quite well in the first ratings reports...it was in the top 20, which is more than you can say for many of the other new series.

Q. Hasn't anyone else noticed that "Love, American Style" is about as outspoken in matters of sex as all the current movies? The only thing missing is the nudity, and I for one think it's disqusting. I really can't see much different between the low comedy segments on the show and the pornography which is being passed off as film art. —R. McR., Wichita, Kans.

A. In all fairness, "Love, American Style" may dabble in risque double entendres but it can hardly be campared to many current films dealing with far more explicit sexual scenes and speech.

Dramatic Specials On The CBS Network

"Romeo and Juliet" to Be First of the Joseph Papp Productions

The New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater and the CBS Television Network have entered into a long- term agreement under the terms of which a series of dramatic specials will be presented on the Network over the next four years, it was jointly announced today by Robert D. Wood, President of the Network, and Joseph Papp, founder and head of the Theater.

The initial presentation, the Theater's acclaimed production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," will be produced and directed by Papp during the coming season, the date to be announced.

In making the announcement, Mr. Wood emphasized his pleasure in presenting on the Network "one of the most vital and creative forces in the theater today," thereby making it available far from the confines of New York, where it has flourished so dramatically.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be costumed and designed traditionally but executed in the creative theater atmosphere for which Papp has become famous.

Papp has built his Public Theater from a Shakespeare workshop in a Presbyterian church Sunday school to its important theatrical position both at the free admission, outdoor Delacorte Theater in Central Park and in his off-Broadway theater complex in the East Village, where under his direction the initial production of "Hair" started growing.

He is also represented on Broadway with two productions, David Rabe's anti-war satire "Sticks and Bones" and the rock-musical version of Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," which won Tony Awards this year for best play and best musical, respectively. Both productions has started their lives way off-Broadway, the former at Papps's Lafayette Street Public Theater, and the latter in Central Park, where the innovative producer's "Romeo and Juliet" made its debut under star-crossed metropolitan skies.

In the course of his producing career, Papp has done the Bard thoroughly, from "As You Like It" to the acclaimed recent Central Park production of "Hamlet," starring Stacy Keach and Colleen Dewhurts.

His belief in young, contemporary writers as "an important natural resource" has also resulted in a variety of originals, such as Rabe's "The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel," the Pulitzer Prize-winning 1969 production of Charles Cordone's "No Place to Be Somebody," and Jason Miller's "That Championship Season," which won a New York Critic's Award this year along with "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

In presenting his productions on network television, Papp will be realizing his ambition to make the theater "a creative social force" not only in New York but throughout the country.

William Morris Agency represented Joseph Papp in negotiations with the CBS Television Network.

Leading Into Saigon

Red Attacks Close Roads

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks closed two major highways leading into Saigon from the east and south and created huge traffic jams today. A third main road north of the capital was cut anew.

Hundreds of government reinforcements were trying to reopen the roads.

Meanwhile, a new drive was launched by thousands of South Vietnamese infantrymen east of An Loc aimed at regaining control of the old U.S. base in the Quan Loi rubber plantation 60 miles north of Saigon.

Initial reports said 39 North Vietnamese troops were killed as South Vietnamese columns moved toward Quan Loi from three sides. Nine government soldiers were killed and 20 were wounded, field reports said.

U.S. B52 bombers were backing the Quan Loi operation as well as South Vietnamese forces operating on every other front.

On the far northern front, waves of the big bombers pounded North Vietnamese troop concentrations within six miles of the old imperial capital of Hue. Fourteen artillery shells hit the city today, damaging eight houses and wounding two civilians, Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported.

Over North Vietnam, American fighter-bombers launched more than 250 air strikes Friday, the U.S. Command said, hitting supply routes, highways, bridges, supply trucks, water supply craft and fuel depots.

In a delayed report, the command announced that a carrierbased Navy A7 was shot down by a surface to air missile 29 miles southwest of Haiphong on Thursday. The pilot was reported missing.

Highway 1 was closed about 25 miles east of Saigon.

Hundreds of South Vietnamese reinforcements, backed by fighter-bombers, swept into the region in an attempt to root out the enemy forces.

Utilities Injunction Removed

An injunction preventing Missouri Utilities Co. from serving Sikeston residents with electricity through its own distribution system has been removed.

The Missouri Supreme Court has issued an order sustaining the motion of the Cape Girardea utilities company to dismiss an injunctive proceeding brought against it by the City of Sikeston.

The city contended, in its petition for the injunction, that the utilities company was acting without a franchise in the city.

Sikeston's suit was filed on Jan. 10, 1969, in Scott County Circuit Court. It stemmed from action by Missouri Utilities to extend its distribution system in the city during the week of Dec. 10, 1968.

The petition said the city had requested both orally and in writing that the company not make the extension, but the request was denied. Sikeston officials said the city has adequate electrical distribution facilities.

The utility firm asked dismissal of the injunction on several grounds, including its rights to serve customers within the city and to use streets and alleys for the purpose. It also contended the court was without jurisdiction in the matter, which is vested in the Missouri Public Service Commission.

EVEN AFTER TWO heavy rains, mysterious footprints (inside dotted line) can be found on the Kermit Hampton farm near Dexter. The prints are about five inches in diameter and have a unusual heel mark. They run in a straight line between two fields.

Nine Hurt In Area

Two automobile accidents Thursday afternoon resulted in injuries to nine persons in the Bootheel, according to reports issued today by the highway patrol.

At 1:45 p.m. on Route D three miles west of Lilbourn, Larry Tindle, 20, of Lilbourn sustained serious injuries when he lost control of his car, ran off the road and struck a bridge bannister. He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, and later transferred to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Eight were injured in a three-car pileup at 2:10 p.m. on Highway 61 south of Fruitland. Drivers of the vehicles were Phyllis Masters, 28, of Jackson Route Four, William Wallace, 31, of Jackson Route One and Silvia Dove, 34, of Jackson Route One.

Injured were the driver and six passengers in the Masters car, Jerry Masters, 7, cuts and possible internal injuries; Michael Shainer, 12, of Jackson Route Four, head and chin cuts; Beatrice Sullivan, 52, of Portageville Route One, cuts and fractured ribs; John Sullivan, 12, of Portageville, cuts and bruises; Freda Isaacks, 25, of Jackson, cuts and bruises; and Kathy Isaacks, 2, facial cuts. The Dove woman sustained leg cuts. All of the injured were taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

The accident occurred, the patrol said, when the brakes failed on the Dove vehicle as it was coming onto the highway from a private drive. It reportedly struck the Wallace car twice before hitting the Masters car head on.

One Thing For Sure

'Monster' Prints 'Strange'

By RON PORTER

You may have heard the reports of strange "monster" footprints being found on the Kermit Hampton farm near Dexter last week.

The prints are round, about five inches across with a strange heelmark and run in a straight line between two cotton fields.

Well, relax.

Tim Ludwig, The Daily Standard wire editor, and I went to Dexter Thursday and wallowed around in a muddy field investigating the prints. We conclude they were not madeby a strange monster, but were made by a strange horse.

The prints were found last week by Hampton, Ruben Kitrel of Bloomfield and his 15- year- old son Mike. They had gone out into the field, located six miles southwest of Dexter on Route ZZ, to test a new rifle, when the stumbled upon the tracks.

Whatever made the prints was heavy. Each print was unk deeply. The men did not even leave a heel mark. After two hard rains, the prints were still clearly visible Thursday.

At first, the men didn't pay much attention to the tracks. But then they noticed that the tracks ran in almost a perfectly straight line. A closer look showed they were round with heel marks about four inches behind.

Horse fanciers who have seen the tracks deny they could have been made by a horse. They are taking an "I'd have to see it to believe it attitude."

"What on earth would somebody be doing riding a horse down here?" Kitrel asks.

Maybe he can get the answer if he can find the young Dexter man who has been telling people that he rode his horse through the field shortly before the tracks were discovered.

Hampton still doesn't think the tracks were made by a horse, even if someone says they rode through the place where the tracks were found. He says the horse that made those prints would have to be pretty strange.

We agree.

Of course, we recognize the other possibilities. It really could be a monster. Perhaps the one from the northeastern part of the state thumbed a ride on the interstate to Sikeston and then worked its way over into StoddardCounty. It could be done. People who gave him a lift would have thought he was just another college kid.

It might have been a practical joker walking around with coffee cans strapped to the bottom of his feet.

One man, who will remain nameless, suggested the prints were made by a kangaroo. He did not explain what a kangeroo was doing near Dexter.

House Approves Freeze On U.S. Soviet Missles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved the fiveyear U.S.-Soviet missile freeze with only seven dissenting votes but more numerous expressions of trepidation.

The resolution passed 329-7 Friday, although several House members voiced concern that it might allow the Soviets to achieve nuclear superiority.

The action came as Congress adjourned until Sept. 5 for the Republican National Convention and Labor Day.

"I just pray this will not be a nuclear Yalta," said Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., who voted with the majority, as did most others who voiced similar fears.

Senate approval remains stalled over an amendment proposed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., urging President Nixon to seek U.S.-Soviet equality in weapons numbers in any permanent treaty replacing the interim accord. The Senate takes up the measure after the congressional recess.

The five-year agreement signed by Nixon and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow May 26 freezes land-and sea-based intercontinental missiles plus missile-firing submarines at the totals in existence now or under construction.

The Russians are limited to 1,618 land missiles and up to 62 submarines with up to 950 missiles, the United States at 1,054 land missiles and up to 44 submarines with up to 710 missiles.

Both sides are permitted to replace and improve the submarine missiles, including equipping them with multiple warheads.

Warheads and other weapons including shortrange missiles and bombers are not covered by the agreement.

House Foreign Affairs Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, DPa., said the five-year agreement could save the United States $2 billion a year by slowing down the arms race.

Pucinski and Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said the agreement's curb on the Soviet missile buildup was the reason they voted for it

GOP Urges Demos To Reject Left-Wing 'Radical Clique'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republican platform being readied for next week's GOP National Convention invites Democrats to vote for Richard Nixon and forsake what it says is "the radical clique" controlling the Democratic party.

The draft of a first platform section, endorsing a strong defense and standing pat on Nixon's peace-with-honor terms for a Vietnam settlement, was issued late Friday. Two sections on domestic issues are soon to follow.

The draft platform predicts that the Nixon bandwagon will be joined by "millions of discerning Democrats and concerned independents who will not, and cannot, take part in the convulsive leftward lurch of the national Democratic party."

Asserting that the choice for voters is between "strength and weakness for our country in the years to come," the platform extends its open-arms welcome to Democrats in a five-page preamble:

"We invite our troubled friends of other political affiliations to join with us in a new coalition for progress.

"Together let us reject the New Left prescription for folly and build surely on the solid achievements of President Nixon's first term."

The draft will reach the convention Tuesday. Its adoption is considered certain, though floor skirmishes on women's rights and school busing are possible.

The platform language suggested that Republican emphasis on alleged leftward leanings of the Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern, will be a running theme of the GOP's campaign.

The GOP platform draft pledged a continuing quest for a Vietnam settlement permitting the people of Southeast Asia "to live in peace under political arrangements of their own choosing."

It endorsed Nixon's "refusal to accept terms which would dishonor his country" by yielding to Hanoi's demand that the United States scuttle the Saigon government in favor of a Communist-dominated regime.

The plank endorsed Nixon's offer to withdraw remaining American forces four months after an internationally supervised cease-fire has gone into effect and prisoners of war have been returned.

In addition to calling for the return of prisoners and an accounting of the missing in action, the plank declared:

"Here and now we reject all proposals to grant amnesty to those who have broken the law by evading military service."

Youth Hurt As Car Hits Pole

Randy Anthony Herron, 18, of 1401 West Murray Lane, was injured in a one-car accident around 12:45 a.m. today when his car ran off East Malone Avenue and hit a city lightpole.

He was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital with a slight concussion and a broken nose.

His car was badly damaged and the light pole at the corner of East Malone and Ingram Street was destroyed, according to police.

Herron was charged with careless and imprudent driving and destroying city property.

Surprised Is What Linn Smith Felt Friday when he turned around from working on his lawn to find one of the large ornamental bushes beside his driveway blazing. He was able to quickly control the fire with a garden hose, but the bush was lost. Smith said that there was no sign of fire just a few minutes before and that he has no idea how it could have started.

Hijacker Shot By FBI Agents

SEATTLE (AP) — A 43-yearold objector to the war in Vietnam is under guard in a hospital with bullet wounds in the shoulder and leg inflicted by FBI agents in the climax of an elaborate airliner hijack.

Before it ended, the skyjacking covered 12 hours and more than 800 miles—from Reno, Nev., to Vancouver, B.C., and back to Seattle.

Authorities identified the wounded man as Frank Markoe Sibley of Stateline, Nev., and said he would be charged with air piracy. Sibley's wounds were described as serious but not critical.

Sibley was shot in the hijacked United Air Line Boeing 727 late Friday night after his demand for 15 gold bars worth $15,000 had been met in Vancouver and $2 million in cash was delivered to him in Seattle.

Two FBI agents boarded the hijacked plane under the guise of airline employes after the sky pirate insisted on new crewmen.

While the agents were forklifted aboard the 727 seminude to prove they were unarmed, other FBI men prodded a gun on a pole into the cabin. With that weapon, the FBI agents confronted the hijacker in the cockpit as he held an army-type carbine on the airliner's pilot, the FBI said.

An FBI spokesman said about five shots were fired, two of them striking Sibley.

The FBI said Sibley tried to resist after he was hit by drawing a knife but was wrestled out of the plane and to the ground where he was overpowered.

The drama started in Reno early Friday. The hijacker pedaled a bicycle through a hole in a fence and up to the 727, which was preparing to leave for San Francisco with 52 passengers. He was holding a rifle and wearing a ski-mask. A passenger ran into the terminal to report it. Passengers and stewardesses in the plane were hustled out.

Three Youths Held For Burglary Investigation

BENTON -- Three youths are being held by the Scott County Sheriff's office for investigation of burglary of the Joe Spencer home in Chaffee, which took place late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

Being held are Elmer Penrose, 21, of Oran; Clyde Eichhorn, 18, of Chaffee; and Alan Wayne Slinkard, 19, of Chaffee Route One.

They were arrested at their homes Friday, after Deputy Sheriff Dave Sanders was told by a Chaffee policeman that he had seen a car containing what may have been some of the stolen property. Sanders traced the youths through the car.

The youths reportedly admitted the burglary and led police to the stolen property. Police recovered the stolen items, including two stereos, two speakers, a control panel for a shortwave radio, a quantity of wire, a pistol and a pair of brown boots.

THE WAY IT IS

Some Peacemakers aren't really for peace.

Some Capitalists aren't really capitalists

Who are the peacemakers who would make peace at the price of military readiness?

How can they speak of peace while seeking the obliteration of the only force which stands between a free world and the war lords of Russia? How can peace be made by trading with a country whose avowed aim is your destruction?

What is the game? Who plays with the fate of two billion people?

U. S. Rep. John Schmitz of California put names to some of the faces when he wrote, in the Congressional Record, "Who Is Destroying Our Armed Forces?" He quoted a passage from James Rowe's Five Years to Freedom, the true story of a Green Beret's imprisonment by Vietnamese Communists. But inquiry cannot end with Rep. Schmitz's ticking off of names of antimilitarists; the story is deeper than that and is examined in relation to a complex of money, power and internationalism.

Rep. Schmitz's "Who Is Destroying Our Armed Forces?" begins with a paragraph from Rowe's book:

"I could understand opposition to a war and a strong desire for peace. There was nobody who wanted peace more than a soldier because it was his life that was sacrificed in war, his blood that was shed. There couldn't be a protester at home who matched a soldier's sincere desire for peace. Dissent was a part of American life, but to support the enemy at the expense of another American was inconceivable. There was no other place the VC could have gotten some of that information except from the United States and I suddenly felt very sick."

Major Rowe, a Green Beret who spent five years under the most hellish conditions as a prisoner of the Vietcong, had first told them a "cover story" that he was only an engineering officer unfamiliar with the defenses of the Green Beret camp where he was taken prisoner, though in fact he was its executive officer and knew all about its defenses. That fact was given to his captors by traitors in the United States, thus assuring that he would be put to further torture.

The House Internal Security Committee on which Rep. Schmitz serves has been holding hearings on subversion of the military. He is in the process of arranging testimony for the committee from Major Rowe, and the committee has already heard from four-star Gen. Bruce Clark, former commander of all Army ground troops in Europe. General Clark revealed that in 1966 and 1967 there were posters all over Europe, both in headquarters areas and individual unit day rooms, which identified communism as the enemy and reminded our troops that they were there to deter Communist aggression. But when General Clark returned to Europe three years later the posters were gone. When he asked why, he was told they might annoy the Soviets.

As long ago as 1961, the Fulbright memorandum sounded the death knell to educational programs in the military explaining the real nature of the Communist enemy. Senator Fulbright states in that memorandum:

"Fundamentally, it is believed that the American people have little if any need to be alerted to the menace of the cold war."

Fulbright sowed the seed; and in the Communist Daily World for January 28, 1971 — 10 years later — we find an update of his original memorandum, now entitled "The Pentagon Propaganda Machine," vociferously declared must reading for every Communist and fellow traveler in America. Senator Fulbright opposed and continues to oppose any military instruction characterized by "talks from persons who stressed the Communist menace in this country."

He was also one of those who called for the bombing halt that has since doubled American casualties, while stating:

"We could resume bombing at any time if there is no response."

Schmitz's article asks:"Ask the loved ones of the over 50,000 dead and the over three million veterans of the Vietnam war if there has been any response.

"The official policy of our government has become that of the Fulbright memorandum, creating a peculiar - to say the least — educational situation in the Armed Forces. The March 30, 1970, Contemporary Military Reading List of the U. S. Army — Circular No. 1-26 — tells part of the story. The first book synopsis is the Discipline of Power, by George W. Ball, who is indexed for 5-1/2 pages in the congressional 'military muzzling' hearings in opposition to educating our Armed Forces in the nature of communism."

Ball was quoted as outling official government policy in this way:

"Nothing must be done to endanger communications between this country and the Communists. No reference must be made to communism as the enemy. Furthermore this country is not striving for victory in the Cold War. The United States should not under any circumstances refer to Communist tactics as brutal nor should the word slavery be used in referring to Communist takeovers of captive people."

It was George Ball who in 1968 had the job of persuading Congress "that US trade with Russia and its satellites would promote peace, soften up Communist regimes behind the Iron Curtain and end the Cold War."

Schmitz goes on. "Tell that to the widows of officers who have been shot down by Soviet antiaircraft rockets made in the Soviet Union. Trade agreements with a nation which supplies so many of the weapons used to kill our fighting men surely fit the constitutional definition of treason as giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Our troops who have been killed by the products of this trade can no longer cry out for justice against the likes of those who have forbidden them to learn about the enemy they have given their life's blood to fight. Nor do most Americans in high places seem ready and willing to do it for them."

John F. Kennedy put George Ball in the number three spot in the State Department, a power position Ball used to muzzle the military. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) and a trustee of the American Assembly and a member of Clarence Streit's Atlantic Union, long-time sounding board for one world government.

Ball also heads Lehman Brothers International, part of the Lehman investment banker firm.

There is a money and ideological linking among the international bankers, some of whom have financed international communism and all of which openly or secretely promote trade with the Soviet Union. Such firms with CFR members in their corporate ranks are Kuhn Loeb & Co., Lazard Freres (a patriarch of which recruited Eugene Meyer into the firm before Meyer founded the Washington Post, a most extreme liberal daily), and, yes, Lehman Brothers.

The investment bankers arrange mergers for corporations and often put up all the cash to purchase shares of new issues of stock which they sell to the public.

Peaceniks whose political heroes are Jake Javits and Ted Kennedy would be appaled to learn the two Senators are quite close to the head of one such investment banking firm which has underwritten stock issues of such as the napalm makers and the "smart bomb" makers and other firms that supply the munitions of war. To think that the doves would enter the nest of those who would aid and abet the killing of innocent Vietnamese Communists! Any radical lib could ask: Is there no end to duplicity? If profit is to be gained by grinding the faces of the poor, let the hated capitalists do it, but spare us the knowledge that our liberals are even remotely involved.

The international bankers, whose role is fully explained in The Naked Capitalist, finance and help reorganize corporations, and place directors on their boards. A search through Standard and Poor's Directory shows that most companies which have an association with the CFR do not connect with it directly by officer affiliation, but by having CFR members on the board of directors. The internationalists also influence government policy by placing CFR members or non-CFR people of internationalist bent in government.

The recent trip to Moscow opened the American door to trade with Russia as never before, with untold riches accruing to those who hold the reins of power or the stock of the right companies. The international socialists dressed in capitalist garb apparently cannot lose. They will be helping mother Russia which has welched on many a deal; no matter, the government will bail the American traders out if Russia should cause them a loss. The bailout will come from the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC), an independent agency of the government which is run by, of course, two CFR members.

The game is difficult to figure. It seems to be purely for profit with a side benefit of aiding beloved Russia, while moving to a one world state. Who will rule this behemoth and its subjects? Will the Internationalist - socialists who pose as capitalists? Will the Communists? Probably the latter, because in 1917 when one international banker, Jacob Schiff of Kuhn Loeb & Co., gave the bolsheviks $20 million, the Russians had nothing but starvation. Now they've got a third of the world's population and nuclear missiles pointed at the rest.

So it remains to be seen if the game can continue to be played as it has been: the balance of power between Russia and the United States being manipulated by the internationalists who put governments and corporations in hock to them, and control international credit and pave or block the avenues of trade.

So far, progress toward so-called "world peace" and "One World" has been written in blood, from the Winter Palace in 1917 to Quang Tri City 1972. If this be the seeking of peace, war must be hell indeed.

BICYCLES AND SAFETY

From the Hartford Courant

As anyone who has tried to buy a bicycle lately knows, lots of people are doing the same thing. Santa ran seriously short of Christmas bikes last year, and manufacturers are running at full tilt in a futile attempt to keep up with the sudden demand.

Thsoe who have been lucky enough to obtain their bicycles are using them in unprecedented ways and numbers. At one time, bicycles were used mainly by youngsters around their own neighborhoods and schools. Now, adults are joining the crowd and are using their bikes for the sake of health, recreation an pollution -free transportaion. Many are used for commuting and shopping trips.

The increased bicycle traffic and the changes in the way they are used has, understandably, led to an increase in bicycle accidents, an increase large enough to attract the attention of the National Safety Council.

Except for uncrowded areas or a few specific bicycle paths, a bike rider can easily find himself dangerously out of place. He is vulnerable in heavy auto traffic, and if he moves to the sidewalk, he presents a danger to pedestrians.

The Safety Council has just launched a three-year study of the bicycle safety problem. It will look into the types and causes of recent bicycle accidents and try to develop a practical program to prevent them.

The bike boom has outdistanced most existing safety programs, which have primarily been rather lightweight efforts aimed at young riders. The Safety Council's new program is an effort that, whether we really know it or not, appears to be needed.

The average head of hair, male or female, was thought to contain 100,000 hairs. But that was before an ambitious cosmetics firm started counting! The results: Blond heads have 180,000 hairs, a contrasted to 120,000 fo brunettes, and 50,000 for redheads.

GUILD ENDORSEMENT

Traditionally, newspaper reporters have remained aloof in politics and devoted their energies to non-participant, objective coverage of party activities and elections. Now the American Newspaper Guild has broken precedent and voted an endorsement of Sen. George McGovern in his bid for the presidency. Legally there is no challenge of the Guild's action. Nor is there a challenge of its selection of candidate, but the wisdom of endorsing anyone is a matter of grave concern.

The people of this country, in fact the world, have come to expect non-biased reporting of our political doings. We have a right to expect no less and we may still get objectivity. It was this Guild, voting as a union, that endorsed the candidacy of Sen. McGovern. Individual newsmen may still meet their responsibility of unbiased coverage.

Suspicions will exist, though. These suspicions will be voiced by candidates and the electorate alike. By tradition, labor organization is for the purpose of salary and rights bargaining. The courts long since have upheld the rights of reporters to organize. The rights of the public to objective reporting have existed since the foundation of the Republic.

It is the belief here that a vast majority of reporters covering this fall's election will meet its responsibility to the people. If they do not, we are in for serous trouble. The term Fourth Estate has a significant and precious meaning. The Fourth Estate members should remain aloof from the other three and report their doings. The system is as vital to the cause of freedom as government itself. HLH.

Justice Dept. Strike Force Network Has Crippled Mafia's National Syndicate By Victor Riesel

U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst notes here that the Democrats have charged the Nixon administration has given the country nothing but tough words.

In a fighting mood the comparatively new Attorney General challenges this and with a counterthrust says the Nixon White House has built the strongest anti-organized crime machine in history. Here is one of the Attorney General's first full analyses made since he was confirmed. It was written exclusively for this column. By Richard KleindienstAttorney General of the U.S.

WASHINGTON -- The Nixon administration's record in coming to grips with the problem of crime in the United States was the subject of some concern recently by the Democratic Platform writers. "This Administration," they declared, "has given us nothing but tough words."

And having made this claim, the Democratic platform writers promised to attack the crime problem by upgrading police forces, improving their technological capabilities, bringing organized crime to justice, opening a massive assault on the drug traffic, mounting an all-out drive against corruption in government, and other equally laudatory measures.

There are two things wrong with this plank in the Democratic platform.

First, the hallmark of the Nixon administration's onslaught against crime has been not words but action. The crime epidemic which grew to alarming proportions during the previous Democratic administrations, whose response was to study the problem without facing it, is now being turned around under the national leadership of President Nixon.

Second, almost all of the remedies proposed by the Democratic platform to cut crime have long since been adopted by the Nixon administration. They are among the reasons why we are succeeding where the Democrats failed.

Violent crime more than doubled during the tenure of the Democrats from 1961 to 1968. They answered the problem by creating a crime commission to investigate it, and then proceeded to ignore most of the commission's recommendations.

They opposed legislation to assist law enforcement officers in bringing offenders to justice, including the use of court-authorized wiretapping that Congress provided against organized crime.

The sum total of their Federal assistance to state and local criminal justice systems was less thean $34 million.

After this record during the eight years of rising crime while they were in office, the credibility of their new-found concern for the safety of the American people seem somewhat disingenuous.

By contrast, the Nixon administration has mounted a total assault on all fronts against the crime wave in the United States.

We have provided national leadership and financia assistance totaling $1.5 billio to the states and localities in the past three fiscal years and, despite politically inspired criticism of this program, Congress has shown its confidence by approving the $850 million that we requested for the 1973 budget.

We have mobilized every possible Federal resource in attacking the drug traffic and drug abuse. We have won the active cooperation of the foreign countries that have been the sources of narcotics entering this country when many of our opponents said it couldn't be done.

One result was that, in 1971, Federal authorities removed from the world market about five times as much heroin or equivalent opium derivatives as were removed in 1968, the last year of the previous Administration. More recently, an additional program of cooperation between Federal, state and local anti-drug agencies, aimed at disrupting heroin traffickers at the street level, has resulted in more than 900 arrests since May of this year.

This offensive has created shortages of heroin in some of the major American cities, and one result has been to bring thousands of addicts into treatment centers established with the aid of Federal funds.

In our drive on organized crime, where the previous Administration had established only seven Strike Forces on an ad hoc basis in large American cities, we have put them on a permanent basis and increased the number to 18. And whereas the previous Administration had refused to use the court-authorized wiretapping provided by Congress, we have employed this enforcement tool from the beginning and have gained evidence against hundreds of racketeers that was unobtainable any other way.

As a result, we have mounted a far more effective drive against organized crime than had been possible before. In 1971 we obtained indictments against more than 2,600 members or associates of organized crime syndicates--more than triple the number indicted in 1968. Convictions of such persons in 1971 nearly doubled the number in 1968.

In New York, Chicago, and many other cities we have torn big gaps in the ranks of the top gangland leaders.

Finally, what has been the overall result of the Nixon administration's drive against crime? We can only take part of the credit, because most crimes are not Federal crimes, and the states and localities have also redoubled their anti-crime efforts. But for the first time in many years, the latest statistics show that the rise in crime has been reduced to a par with the rise in population. For the first quarter of 1972, serious crime in the United States showed only a 1 per cent increase over the same quarter in 1971.

This is part of the trend that has been apparent in annual statistics for three years. In 1968, the last year of the previous Administration, serious crime rose 17 per cent. Since then the increase has been tapering off -- 11 per cent in 1969, 10 per cent in 1970, and only 6 per cent in 1971. The first-quarter figures for 1972 show that we are now within reach of an actual decrease in crime.

This has already been accomplished in a growing numger of large American cities which have populations of 100,000 or more. In 1969, 17 such cities registered actual decreases in crime. In 1970, the number rose to 22, and in 1971 it climbed to 53 cities. For the first quarter of 1972, 30 cities showed an actual lecrease.

One of the cities spearheading this reduction has been Washington, D.C., the only city under Federal jurisdiction. All through the '60s, however, crime increased at a dangerous rate. The criminal justice system in the nation's capital was incapable of dealing with this desperate problem. Little had been done by the previous Administrations to reform the system in their own backyard.

But between 1969 and 1971, crime in the District of Columbia decreased a total of 18 per cent. For the first quarter of 1972, crime was down more than 30 per cent from the same period in 1971.

The reduction in crime also applies to the very large metropolises which have been the major contributors to crime – and to the fear of crime. In the first quarter of 1972, total crime in the six largest American cities (those of more than 1 million population) decreased 6 per cent, compared to a 12 per cent increase in the first quarter of 1971.

These statistics are very heartening to the Department of Justice. They should be equally encouraging to all law-abiding citizens. None of us will be satisfied, however, until we see an overall reduction in the crime rate. With the increase down to 1 per cent, we hope that this day is close at hand.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

MIAMI BEACH -- No one is holding his breath over the outcome of the Republican convention at Miami Beach. But in the smoke-filled backrooms, the maneuvering already has started over the 1976 presidentail nomination.

The Republican faithful, of course, won't challenge President Nixons's choice of Spiro Agnew as his running mate for another term. But this doesn't mean they are ready to accept him as Nixon's successor in 1976.

Agnew has already signalled his intention to move up to the front of the ticket four years from now. But opposition is developing, particularly among GOP moderates. They have dropped quiet hints that Agnew would appeal to the same limited constituency in 1976 as Barry Goldwater did in 1964.

Although Richard Nixon will be a lame-duck President at the 1976 convention, he should still control the party machinery. He could, if he wished, determine who his successor will be.

White House aides tell us the President would not impose his choice upon the party but would remain above the struggle. The anti-Agnew forces, however, are taking no chances. They intend to present their arguments to the President in the months ahead.

They will plead that the party's future could be impaired by an Agnew candidacy and that he should be headed off before he can gain too strong a hold on the party machinery.

ROCKEFELLER'S ROLE

The anti-Agnew Republicans also look hopefully to New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller for support. Agnew was Rockefeller's most vocal champion in the early 1968 presidentail maneuvering. But Agnew adroitly switched to Nixon in a manner that won him the vice presidency and lost him Rockefeller's friendship.

Rockefeller, however, has been snuggling up to President Nixon lately and, in the process, has improved his relationship with Agnew. The New York governor, therefore, may not be available to challenge Agnew in the struggle ahead. Aware of the political axiom that you can't beat somebody with nobody, some Republican moderates are rallying, meanwhile, around Illinois' Senator Charles Percy as the best man to stop Agnew in 1976.

It is perhaps a measure of their desperation that the embryonic Percy for President forces have spread the rumor that Agnew, after getting the vice presidential nomination, will resign and invite the convention to choose someone else.

The reason, according to the rumor, is that Agnew has had his fill of politics and would like to devote himself now to making some money for his family. But he is a proud man -- so the story goes -- who didn't want to appear to be dropped from the ticket.

A spokesman assured us Agnew is ready with acceptance speech. Others close to the Vice President says he has every intention of using his position for the next four years to consolidate his strength with the party and to go after the presidential prize.

Footnote: Former Secretary of the Treasury John Connally might also challenge Agnew for the presidency. There can be no denying the rivalry between the two men. Connally, apparently, in keeping his options open whether to become a Republican or remain a Democrat. California's Governor Ronald Reagan also has an eye on the White House. But he could lose his power base in 1974 when his term as governor expires. He has mentioned guardedly that he might run for the Senate against Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who must stand for re-election in 1974. Reagan's popularity in California, however, has been declining.

NIXON'S GULF

A relaxed President Nixon hopes to mix a little golf with politics during the Republican convention.

He is the first to acknowledge, however, that he's no Arnold Palmer. He tells the story on himself about the time he proudly announced to his foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, that he had scored 130.

This is hardly championship golf, but Kissinger wanted to be tactful He said he was glad the president had enjoyed his golf game.

"I was bowling, Henry" growled the President. His game at the White House bowling alleys, as the score indicated, had been improving.

Footnote: One of the President's most treasured trophies, however, is a golf score card appropriately lacquered and framed. It records the occasion 11 years ago when he scored a hole-in-one at the Bel Air golf course in California. The President is sure to bring it up when the anniversary comes up on Labor Day. What he doesn't usually mention is that he scored a six and seven on the holes before and after his miraculous shot.

Ford 'Speculates' On Peace Report

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Emphasizing that he was commenting on "a strictly speculative basis," House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford said today there is a "possibility" an announcement concerning peace in Vietnam may be forthcoming at the Republican National Convention.

But he added at a news conference he had no inside information about the possibility of President Nixon making such an announcement when he makes his acceptance speech next Wednesday night.

The President's foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, returned today from another visit to South Vietnam and scheduled a report to the President.

Ford, who will be permanent chairman of the convention starting Monday, also said there "is a possibility" that Republicans will capture control of Congress in the 1972 elections if the President "runs well."

The odds against picking up the 38 to 40 seats needed to win the House are slightly against the Republicans, Ford said.

Ford said he hoped the Senate would act promptly on the antibusing bill passed by the House this week.

"It would be absolutely unconscionable" if a filibuster blocked a Senate vote, he said.

Ford said arbitrary action by federal courts in Richmond, Va., and Detroit made congressional action to curb busing necessary.

"If the courts don't get the message from the people, or from Congress in a legislative way," he added, a constitutional amendment may be necessary.

Second Coup Fails In Morocco

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II has made clear that the second abortive military coup against him in 13 months - this time apparently by his most trusted army general - will change little in his autocratic style of running Morocco.

Hassan's interior minister, Mohammed Benhima, said Friday, "I don't see why we'll change our methods because eight F5s were so crazy as to bomb us. Our actions will continue. We will follow our policies."

Benhima made the assertion after he called Gen. Mohamed Oufkir the traitor behind the jet fighter attack on the King's plane and palace Wednesday.

Oufkir, who as defense minister had held powers of martial law following the coup attempt last July against Hassan, took his own life after the latest coup failed, Benhima said.

He described it as a "traitor's suicide" and said Oufkir probably had a role in the 1971 assassination attempt.

At the same time as Benhima was suggesting the king would continue to govern with complete authority, he said a reform program begun last year would be pursued.

"We are going to distribute recovered land from now until October and thousands of farmers are going to get land," Behnima asserted. "By an additional tax, we are trying to favor the rich classes less for the benefit of the poor classes."

Ford To Limit 1973 Price Hike

DETROIT (AP) — Acting under pressure from the White House, Ford Motor Co. announced today that it would limit the price increase of 1973 model cars to $59—the same limit announced earlier by General Motors Corp.

Ford previously had announced an average $92 increase and GM a $90 boost. Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. still are clinging to previously announced increases of about $110 and $180 per car respectively.

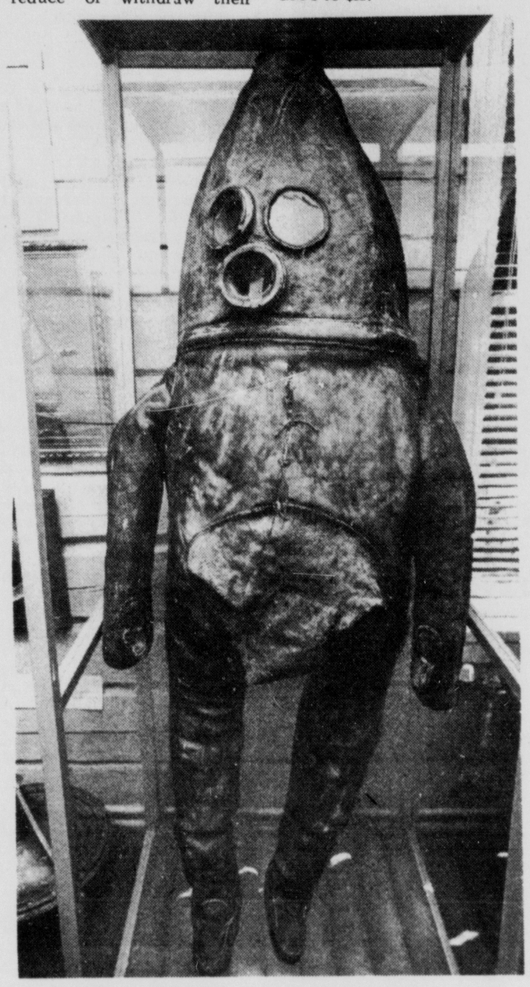

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, acting on President Nixon's orders, asked the car makers earlier this week to reduce or withdraw their requests for price boosts.

Rumsfeld said Friday he hoped Ford would withdraw the increase completely.

"Obviously, we hope that Ford will make a decision to withdraw its request to the Price Commission," he said, adding that such a move could force the other three automakers into line for competitive reasons.

Rumsfeld had said he was waiting for an answer from Ford before making a final decision on efforts to get the automakers to cut the increases.

Ford's cutback amounted to an average of $33 per car; GM's to $31.

Republicans Make Fortress Of Hotel

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republicans have taken over one of Miami Beach's fanciest hotels for $100,000 and turned it into a fortress. Guards to the left, guards to the right, guards in the hallways and guards outside.

The only thing lacking at the 17-floor Doral Hotel is a moat.

Security is tight enough to guard a president, but President Nixon isn't staying there during next week's Republican National Convention. His wife and daughters will be a few doors away at the bigger, flashier Fontainebleau.

To get into the Doral you must show a badge. To walk around, you must be escorted. Incredulous newsmen asked the reason. The answer was that the Committee for the Re-election of the President needs privacy and, anyway, an escort would get one to the right people quicker.

One newsman, being escorted to the hotel sales manager's office, was stopped eight times to show identification. So was the escort, an official of the committee.

Ann Dore, who handles press relations for the re-election committee, joked today that she couldn't get into the hotel after leaving it Friday night.

"We had our first day, yesterday, our security people very excited about their new jobs," she said and then announced that the entire lower and upper lobbies would be opened.

A month ago, when Democratic presidential hopefuls and their staffs were here, the Doral was headquarters for Sen. George McGovern. A happy informality reigned—kids in sunsuits, tieless staff members and a lot of bustling.

McGovern had three floors for himself and his staff.

The Republicans took over the whole hotel—420 sleeping rooms at $30 to $80 a night, ballrooms that can seat 1,300, Starlight Roof, Iberian Conference Rooms, the Spanish Court Yard and all the things the Doral advertises as "facilities in the sun." The latter includes the hotel's private stretch of Atlantic Ocean.

"It's a new concept for us, too," said David Johnson, the Doral's general sales manager. "It's very difficult to empty a hotel for a specific group." And, he added, somewhat wistfully, it's just as hard to fill it again after the big show.

Platform Points Given

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Following are main points of the defense and foreign affairs sections of the proposed platform that will be submitted to the Republican National Convention Tuesday:

—Full backing of President Nixon's terms for the Indochina war.

—No amnesty for draft dodgers and deserters.

—A strong defense establishment, rejecting deep cuts in aircraft and missile programs, naval strength and troops in Europe.

—An all-volunteer armed force and a goal of ending the draft by mid-1973.

—Continued help to Israel to prevent any military imbalance, and efforts to bring the contending Middle East states to the conference table.

—Followups to Nixon's efforts at improving relations with the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, but also close cooperation with Taiwan, Japan and NATO allies.

Nixon To Receive Report From Kissinger Tonight

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Nixon receives a report from Henry Kissinger tonight on the foreign affairs adviser's quick around-the-world trip, a journey which kindled speculation about possible movement in the Vietnam peace talks.

The White House said Kissinger would fly to the Camp David presidential retreat for the dinner meeting with Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers following his late afternoon return to the United States from the Paris-to-Saigon-to-Tokyo trip.

In Saigon, Nixon's assistant for national security affairs met for six hours with South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu. What they discussed was not disclosed, but their meetings came after Kissinger held another of his secret talks in Paris with North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho.

After leaving Saigon, Kissinger stopped in Tokyo to iron out arrangements for Nixon's Aug. 31-Sept. 1 summit in Hawaii with Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

While Nixon was awaiting Kissinger's return, he worked in the seclusion of the Catoctin Mountain compound on the acceptance speech he will give next Wednesday after the Republican National Convention nominates him for a second term.

In Washington, the White House fueled lingering debate over an allegedly missed chance for peace with a new attack Friday on Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver.

Eagleton Requests Death Explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Tom Eagleton, D-Mo., has asked the Pentagon for an explanation of the collapse and death of an Army recruit during a training march at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

Eagleton said Thursday that informal accounts have alleged the four and a half mile march was conducted Aug. 2 under "tortuous conditions."

The recruit was Stephen P. Gasser, Madison, Wis.

Committee Inspects 6 Jails

Scott County Jail Inspection Committee observed six jails throughout the county on Aug. 8 in order to prepare its annual report on jail conditions and make recommendations for improvements.

The committee consists of Robert Suchman of Sikeston, chairman; Mrs. John Marshall of Sikeston, secretary; and Mrs. R. A. Arnold of Scott City. The three- member committee inspected jails in Sikeston, Benton, Illmo, Scott City, Chaffee and Oran.

Inspection of the Sikeston city jail was first made at the old location on North Prairie Street, where all facilities were reported as "very poor and inadequate". A second inspection was made after the jail was moved to its new location on North New Madrid Street, where facilities and conditions were found quite adequate.

The committee recommended personal counseling services for prisoners and also that the food budget be opened to inspection by the committee to improve the inadequate diet of two sandwiches a day and coffee.

The county jail at Benton was under complete reconstruction at the time of the committee's first inspection. A second inspection brought reports of "clean and well- lit cells, individual plumbing, community shower room, laundry room, clothing furnished for inmates while in confinement, visitors lounge and reading room, work release program, separation of juveniles, hardened criminlals and women, modern kitchen facilities and food service with balanced menus, adequate bedding, an intercom system leading to the deputy sheriff's quarters next door, and plans for an area to be used for outdoor exercise."

The committee's one recommendation was that personal counseling services be made available to the inmates.

An inspection of the Illmo city jail revealed that all facilities were clean and had adequate plumbing and sleeping quarters. The food was found to come from a local restaurant and consisted of a balanced diet. The report said, however, the jail does not provide adequate custodial security for a violent criminal. Checking past records, it was found the jail does not have more than 12 holdovers per year. Problem criminals are taken to the county jail in Benton, and the committee recommended that this policy should be continued.

Although the Scott City jail has been remodeled to contain two adequate cells, prisoners must be escorted to the bathroom by the marshal. The committee recommends that if funding can be made available, the entire facility should be brought up to date for the protection of its citizens and, when necessary, that hardened criminals be transported to the county jail in Benton, although this requires the marshal to be out of town for a period of time.

After three inspections of both the Chaffee and Oran city jails, both facilities showed no change and conditions remained "extremely poor." The committee has recommended that both jails be closed. The county jail in Benton, 10 miles away, has volunteered facilities for the few prisoners who would be imprisoned.

Ann Landers

Plants Need Sweet Talk

Dear Ann Landers: Last month I was 40 pounds overweight but I am losing a half a pound every day and will keep at it until I am down to where I ought to be. My story might help someone else, so please print it.

I weighed 117 when I married in 1955. I don't know how it happened but I kept putting on a little here and a little there, usually after pregnancies. Three weeks ago I was horrified when the scales registered 157 pounds! I went to my doctor and asked for some pills. He said nothing doing, insisted on a physical examination, found no organic problem and handed me a diet.

He then asked if I did much cocktailing, if I ate between meals, and what my favorite foods were. When I told him I eat less than anybody in the family he replied, "I hear that all the time." Then he instructed me to carry a pencil and paper for three days and write down everything I put into my mouth, even chewing gum. I thought this was crazy but I did it and it provided the key to the mystery.

I ate only a small bowl of cereal for breakfast, plus a cup of coffee and a piece of buttered toast. But then I found myself writing down, "Finished Tom and Maria's cereal --- just a few spoonfuls . . .Finished John's toast --- half a slice ... Finished Nora's bacon and eggs..."

Dinner was interesting. While preparing the chicken soup I ate a dumpling and a half-cup of noodles. Before I finished the salad, I had put away half an avocado and several "tastes" of salad dressing. I sampled the whipped-cream frosting on the cake and ate just a snidge of fudge sauce. After dinner I finished Maria's soup, Tom's salad and Julie's dessert.

It soon became clear that it wasn't what I was eating at meals that had made me fat, but tasting and finishing up the left-overs on everybody else's plates. Now that I know the facts, I've put an imaginary padlock on my mouth while cooking and cleaning up. It works like a charm.

Great? You'd better believe it, Ann. I feel light as a feather because victory is in sight. --- Former Blimp in Bethesda.

Dear Feather: Bravo. And now, all you overweight readers who "don't eat anything," take a lesson.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote to you a few years ago to say my plants were dying. Then I told you my neighbor explained the reason. She said I didn't speak to them nicely, and their feelings were hurt.

I thought she was nuts, until she showed me how beautifully her plants were flourishing. I concluded there must be something to it and decided to give it a try. Well, Ann, ever since I've started to talk to my plants they've been thriving.

I kept this secret to myself for two years but now I am reading about florists and botanists all over the country who are having fantastic success after speaking to their plants, so I thought I would write again. This morning I read an article about a botanist who proved in an experiment that if you talk mean to a violet, it can faint.

I feel less like a fool now and I hope you will print this letter.———Green Thumb Thelma

Dear Thelma: My florist in Chicago says all plants, to keep healthy, need varying degrees of light, water and heat. When I asked him if he spoke to his plants, he replied, "Only when they speak to me first."

HAVE YOU HEARD WHAT'S HAPPENING AT CROWLEY'S RIDGE RESORT?

Mrs. Terry Vaughn Lape

—Lape-Greene—

DEXTER — Wedding vows were exchanged by Sandra Kay Greene and Terry Vaughn Lape last Saturday at 4 p.m. with the Rev. Stanley Land officiating at the double- ring ceremony in First Christian Church.

White majestic daisies and orchid pompoms were used in church decorations. Pews were decorated with sprays of fern tied with orchid satin ribbon.

Bob Williamson of Sikeston, organist, played a medley of wedding selections before the ceremony and accompanied Mrs. Barbara Shirey of Oran as she sang, "The Wedding Song", and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Greene, Kenton Road in Dexter, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Lape of Sikeston Route Three.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal - length gown of sheerganza and Chantilly lace. The neckline was enhanced with a ruffled collar of sheer organza. The long, sheer sleeves with ruffled cuffs provided the touches for a Victorian look. A Chantilly lace pinafore, with ruffles on each side and over the shoulder created an apron effect.

A tnree-tiered, floor-length veil of English illusion was attached to her large, organdy, brimmed hat with a crown of flowers. Flowers were repeated on the streamers down the back. She carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and a white orchid.

Miss Rhonda Mason of Overland was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Bird of Matthews and Miss Linda Greene, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore gowns of orchid cotton overlaid with matching organza. They were fashioned with a high, lace-trimmed neckline and long, sheer sleeves that were edged with Venice lace. The lace was repeated on the bodice to give a pinafore effect. Wide ruffled flounces at the hemlines completed the gowns.

Their headpieces were large, white, picture hats laced with orchid ribbon. They carried white, garden baskets filled with fern, white daisies and orchid pompoms.

Karen Dean of Caruthersville, cousin of the bride was flower girl. She wore a dress of orchid organza over taffeta with puff sleeves and touches of Venice lace.

She wore a headpiece of orchid flowers and streamers and carried a white organza and lace basket filled with orchid petals.

Larry Greene, Jr., of Sikeston, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer and wore an Eton suit of navy blue.

Danny Lape of Sikeston, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were David Lape and Ken Lape, brothers of the groom. Ushers were Don Broughton of Shelbina and Rich Barrett of Mound City.

The bride's mother wore an ensemble of sheer, blue, silk organza, matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother wore a dress of mint-green organza, green accessories and a white cymbidium orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church. Silver candlelabras with white tapers and orchid flowers were used on the bride's table which held the four-tiered wedding cake.

Serving were Mrs. Berneda Green of Sikeston, sister-in-law of the bride; Claudine Green of Malden, aunt of the bride, Betty Hester of Bloomfield and Linda Garner of Dexter.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the groom's parents Aug. 11 at Ramada Inn near Sikeston.

The bride and groom are both 1969 graduates of Matthews High School. She is a graduate of Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau, and he will be a senior at University of Missouri - Columbia in September. They will live in Columbia.

Local Girl To Participate In 'Miss Dogpatch USA' Contest

Claudia Mulcahy

Miss Claudia Mulcahy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Mulcahy of Sikeston, arrived today in Dogpatch, Ark., to participate in the fourth annual "Miss Dogpatch USA" pageant.

Sikeston Entries Eliminated

PARMA — Hayti, Poplar Bluff and Dexter joined the host club as the four semifinalists in the first annual Southeast Missouri Little League championship tournament, after two Sikeston entries failed to make the grade, along with Hornersville Friday night. Twenty teams began play last Sunday for the coveted honor.

Tonight's semifinal pairings match Hayti against Parma at 6:30 and Poplar Bluff battling Dexter at 8 p.m.

Hayti outslugged Hornersville 9-6 in Friday's opening battle and Poplar Bluff posted a 7-5 decision over the Sikeston All-Stars before Dexter eliminated the Sikeston Aces 5-4 with a run in the bottom of the sixth.

Wayne Dodson paced an eight-hit Hayti attack with two key singles while battling in the seventh spot in the lineup and picked up four RBI's to back Mike Thomas' seven-hit pitching.

Hornersville pounded out seven hits, including a double by Larry Bibbs and tripes by Bill Kackley and Larry Etheridge, but failed to connect at the appropriate time after spotting their opponents a 5-0 lead in the second inning.

Poplar Bluff rallied from a 5-4 deficit with three big runs in the last of the fifth frame to race ahead of Sikeston's best offerings. Larry Hit went three for three at the plate for the Junior Raiders, ripping a double, along with Johnny Taylor, and a triple off the bat of winning hurler Mike Lynch.

Ivory Joe David and Mike Buchanan slugged out two hits apiece to head Sikeston's eight-hit barrage. Buchanan connected for a triple to start the All-Stars big fifth frame.

A leadoff walk in the sixth inning and some wild pitching led to Sikeston Aces' elimination from further action in the coveted event. The walked runner eventualy crossed the plate with the deciding run after both clubs had battled in a 4-4 tie since the bottom of the third.

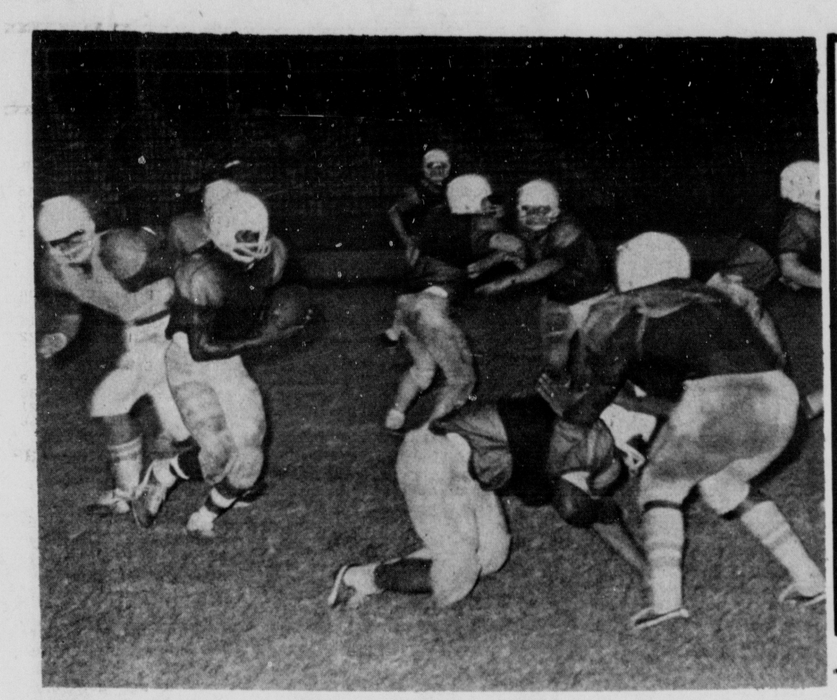

Mike Espey and Larry Gordan collected two hits each to lead Dexter's five-hit attack, while Bruce Hyslop checked Sikeston on six hits and retired 11 of the last 12 men he faced.

NCAA Hands Out Penalties

BOSTON (AP) — The University of Kansas, Duke and Eastern Michigan were placed on the National Collegiate Athletic Association's one-year probation list today while the University of California looked forward to getting off the penalty roles earlier than some expected.

The powerful policy-making council of the NCAA censured and handed stiff penalties to Kansas, Duke and Eastern Michigan Friday in the windup of week-long NCAA meetings.

California, placed on indefinite suspension for violations of the 1.6 academic code last August, satisfied the NCAA it has been operating under the minimum regulation since last Feb. 1. The council imposed a one-year probation retroactive to that date.

Kansas was censured and placed on two years probation by its Big Eight Conference in October, 1970. The NCAA made its own investigation and included other alleged rule violations which were "washed out."

The NCAA handed down its decision against Kansas for many violations, including such minor infractions as providing athletes theatre discount cards.

The most serious charges against Kansas included one that a former assistant football coach certified two players as eligible under the 1.6 academic rule "on the basis of fraudulent high school ranks." Other violations involved recruiting, financial aid and ethical conduct.

The NCAA ordered that Kansas' football, basketball and track teams be barred from post-season competition during the probationary period. The football team also is banned from participation in NCAA controlled television programs.

California originally was penalized for violation of the 1.6 rule for permitting track star Isaac Curtis and football tight end Larry Brumsey to compete. Both since have left the university.

Duke was censured for violating recruiting rules, mainly in entertaining and transporting prospective student athletes. However, only the basketball team will be barred from postseason play next spring.

Eastern Michigan was reprimanded for violating several NCAA rules governing financial aid to students, ethical conduct in which a basketball player hit an opponent, and the academic regulation involving five players.

Eastern Michigan's teams in basketball, baseball, track and wrestling were declared ineligible for post-season play next year.

Durham Backs Win With HR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "He was a first baseman and they made him a pitcher—I think I'll put him back at first," is St. Louis Cardinals' manager Red Schoendienst tribute to rookie pitcher Don Durham.

Schendienst, of course, was kidding. Durham, a 23-year-old right hander from Yosemite, Ky., doesn't do too badly on the mound either, as evidenced by his 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night.

Durham, who had dropped his first five major league decisions since being promoted from Tulsa last month, was a virtual one-man gang with a home run, a single and two runs scored.

Durham, now 1-5, entered the seventh with a four-hitter and a 2-1 lead before Diego Segui took over and pitched 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief for his sixth save.

"The home run was incidental to the win," declared Durham. "Believe me, getting my first major league win is my biggest thrill ever. It's especially sweet after that rugged 0-5 start.

"I had a few tough breaks in my previous games," he says, "but I felt a lot of stronger tonight. The cooler weather here helped me. I felt loose and wasn't sapped of my strength."

Durham who batted .418 his final season at Western Kentucky University as a pitcher— first baseman, singled in the third inning and scored on Ted Sizemore's single.

He homered off loser Jim Willoughby, 2-1, in the fifth, giving him a string of five straight hits, including his second major league homer. Durham forced a runner in the seventh, dropping his average to .556.

"The homer didn't really surprise me," the rookie offered. "It was a hanging slider and I was looking for it. I never was a power hitter, but I did have one homer at Tulsa this season." aSegui, who was bypassed by the Giants on the waiver list before joining St. Louis from the Oakland A's, worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh and retired eight of the 10 batters he faced.

"I was lucky, but it's better to be lucky than good sometimes," said Segui. "It's tough in this league because there are so many artificial turfs. Anything hit into the ground has a chance."

The Giants, who played the Cardinals in the second game of the series today, had few bright spots. Ken Henderson extended his batting streak to 15 games with a run-scoring single in the sixth.

Conservation Meeting At Ramada Sept. 11

State Rep. Fred E. (Gene) Copeland of New Madrid today announced that the Missouri Conservation Commission would hold public hearings in Sikeston next month to receive suggestions and complaints regarding wildlife practices.

Copeland had requested that the commission depart from its normal meetings schedule to hold a public forum in Southeast Missouri. He said hunters and fishermen seldom have the opportunity to voice their opinions directly to the Conservation Commission, and he felt this was a need which should be met.

Advance notice is not required in order to testify at the hearing, which Copeland said would be held at 10 a.m. Monday, Sept. 11, at Ramada Inn near Sikeston.

"People who are strongly interested in hunting, fishing and conservation have definite ideas of their own about wildlife management and hunting seasons," Copeland said, "and I particularly have heard many suggestions about the rules and regulations for waterfowl.

"This public hearing provides a rare opportunity to be heard, and it was arranged for just that purpose. I hope all Southeast Missourians who are concerned about conservation topics will plan to attend and make their feelings known."

Cotton Meeting Set

BLOOMFIELD — A Cotton Insect Scouting Meeting will be held next Wednesday on the James Ross farm near Essex, beginning at 9:30 a.m., it was announced by the University Extension Center.

The purpose of this meeting is to teach farmers how to scout their cotton fields for bollworm and boll weevil. Procedure for scouting a field for these pests, how to determine when a field should be sprayed, and recommended control measures will be domonstrated and discussed. Flernoy Jones, extension area entomology, specialist from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville, will be present to assist with this meeting.

Boll weevil are building up in some cotton fields on and along the eastern edge of Crowley's Ridge, and bollworm problems can be expected to begin at any time.

On the other hand, high numbers of beneficial insects are being found in all cotton fields. Consequently, it is important cotton fields be watched carefully, but that insecticides be applied only when necessary. This meeting is being held to assist farmers along this line.

The field in which this meeting will be held is located on the north side of Highway 60 approximately four miles east of the Highway 60-Highway 25 junction and one mile west of the Essex junction.

MISSISSIPPI COUNTY FARMERS this year are planting sunflowers on layout ground for the first time. Over 275 acres of sunflowers have been planted on layout ground in the county, with the United States Department of Agriculture deducting $9.10 per acre from payments made to farmers for set-aside. Wallace Peebles, left, of Pinhook shows his daughter, Katy, right, and Bradley Marshall of New Orleans, La., a portion of the 30 acres he has planted. The blossoms turn away from the sun until they wilt,then droop to the east as the seeds dry.

Continue To Check Fields For Insects

By
THOMAS A BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Grain sorghum producers should continue to watch sorghum fields for insect problems. Sorghum midge may do extensive damage to late-planted fields, and the corn earworm and sorghum webworm could also cause problems in sorghum fields.

Most grain sorghum fields are completely headed out now and can be considered safe as far as the midge is concerned. In spite of the fact that most of these fields have apparently escaped midge damage, late-planted fields that are beginning to head out could be heavily damaged and should be watched very closely for this tiny, orange- bodies, gnat- like insect.

Fields should be sprayed when one or more adult midges per head can be found. Spray applications should be timed so that the first is applied at approximately 50 per cent head emergence and the second applied three to five days later or by the time 90 per cent of the heads have emerged. Two applications will be needed unless the field is very uniform in head emergence. Insecticides recommended for midge control include ethyl parathion, ethion, trithion or diazinon.

Some small, corn earworms are being found in grain sorghum, and more can be expectd in sorghum fields as corn matures and earworms move to other crops. Small earworms may hollow out sorghum grain, and large worms will eat entire grains. An average of one worm per head may cause up to six per cent loss, while an average of two worms per head may cause up to ten per cent grain loss.

Controls should be applied when there is an average of one to two half- grown or smaller worms per head depending upon expected yield potential. Use the lower rate of infestation for fields that are expected to yield 5,000 pounds of grain or more per acre and the higher rate for fields that are expected to yield 2,500 to 3,500 pounds per acre.

Insecticides recommended for earworm control include toxaphene, carbaryl (Sevin) or mevinphos (Phosdrin) per acre. Tight- headed varieties of sorghum are more likely to be infested with earworms than loose- headed varieties.

Sorghum webworms are usually most severe on late-planted sorghum. These worms eat the kernels of ripening grain often destroying all of the grain in the head. Severe infestations may almost completely destroy a crop if not controlled.

Webworms are sluggish caterpillars that are somewhat flattened and thickly clothed with hairs. They are about one-half inche in length when full gown. The body is greenish-tan wit four reddish- brown stripes down the back.

To determine whether or not a field should be sprayed, determine the average number of worms per head and the averatge distance between sorghum heads in inches. At average distances between heads of four, six, eight, 12 and 16 inches, spray when three, four, five, eight, and 10 worms respectively are found. Insecticides recommended for conr earworm control are also recommended for webworm control.

Additional information pertaining to insect control in grain sorghum may be obtained upon request at any county University Extension Center.

Grass Control Field Day Set

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Farmers in the Southeast Missouri and the Bootheel area are invited to attend a Johnsongrass Control Field Day Tuesday, Aug. 29, on the R. B. Potashnick land on Highway 74 west of Cape Girardeau. Most of the treatments involved here been the thio- carbamates and combinations of seed protectants, and triazines, and the thio-carbamates.

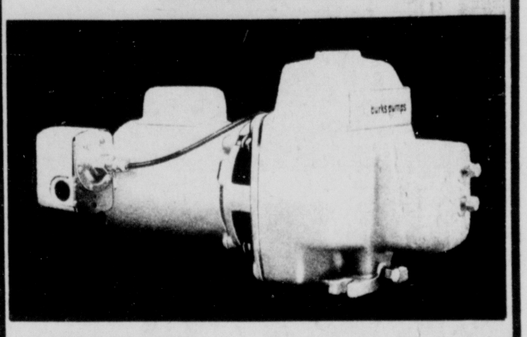

This field day is a cooperative effort of Stauffer Chemical Company and the University of Missouri Extension Division. A free lunch will be provided for all those who attend.

Activities will begin at 10 a.m. Speakers will include Dr. Harold Kerr, weed scientist from the Delta Research denter; Joe Scott, extension agronomist, Delta Research Center; Duaine Kief, research and development, Stauffer Chemical Company; and Elmer Peetz, farmer from Cape Girardeau.

Since the Williams - Steiger Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (OSHA) went into effect, all agricultural employers who employ one or more persons have been covered by the law.

Cotton Featured In Field Day

PORTAGEVILLE -- New and recommended production systems for cotton will be shown and discussed Sept. 7 during the annual Field Day of the Delta Research Center near here. Old standby systems and new experimental systems will be shown as comparisons.

In addition to cotton, field day visitors will see grain sorghum variety and fertilizer rate tests, soybean variety and row- spacing tests and corn insect control tests.

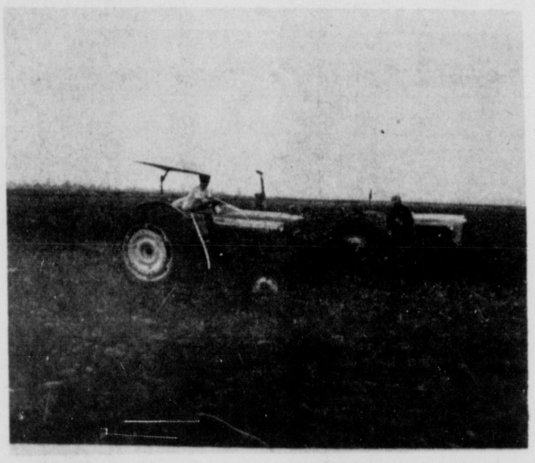

The tour wagons will start their trips around the Lee Farm at 9 a.m. Tours will end between noon and 1 p.m. Lunch will be available.

Lee Farm is located seven miles southeast of Portageville at the intersection of Routes T and TT. It is the largest of several outlying research farms operated by the Delta Research Center, an area center of the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Dr. Norman Brown, center superintendent, has urged area farmers, growers, producers, and agribusinessmen to attend the field day so that all may benefit from the researchers' efforts.

He points out that the cotton studies are very thorough. The tours, he said, will show research into cotton plant populations, varieties, fertilizer rates, fungicides, row spacing and soil types. They also will show the use of chemicals on cotton to control weeds and growth habits and to aid harvest.

Researchers will be on hand to answer questions.

JIM SCHERER, right, and his son Joe, both of Bell City, turn under soybeans for green manure. The beans were sowed with a wheat drill and put down at the rate of two bushels per acre. The beans were an average of three feet high when turned under. Scherer farms one and one- half miles east of Hunter's Gin on Route Y in Stoddard County eight miles southeast of Bell City. Aug. 15 was the deadline for turning under soybeans on set- aside ground.

Find New Objects At Hayti Indian Site

Editors Note:

Southeast Missouri archeology has never been given the sort of publicity that it deserves, especially in southeast Missouri. It was just two weeks ago that The Daily Standard first published an article about a newly found Indian site near Hayti. It is not uncommon for a newspaper to run an account like this; but usually, even if the find proves to be important, there is little follow-up work done in the paper.

This week, The Daily Standard is publishing the first of a series of monthly articles about sites, techniques and the history of archeology in the SeMo region. The articles will be written by Daily Standard Wire Editor Tim Ludwig, collaborating with Scott Grantham, anthropology and archeology professor at Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau.

The first report is about their return to the Hayti site to explore further what was found there.

By TIM LUDWIG
AND SCOTT GRANTHAM

Just over two weeks ago, one of the construction workers on the Interstate 55 project south of Hayti accidentally uncovered what proved to be a one-of -a-kind Indian burial. Unlike normal burials in this area, which are usually in the ground with protection or in urns or pots of clay, this particular grave site contained two clay coffins.

A clay urn could be compared to a large jar, while these coffins were actually two deep trays put together face to face with the bones inside.

After excavating two of these coffins, a team sent to Hayti from University of Missouri left the site to the inevitable road machinery. We were lucky enough to work at the site a few days later, still undisturbed by road work. We set to work by starting outward from the edge of the excavation left by the MU team. Within the first few shovels full of dirt we struck our first artifacts, part of a flexed burial.

There are three main types of burial positions: flexed, bundle and normal, prone positions. Prone is the normal lying down position. Bundle is a burial done by allowing all flesh to rot or be removed from the bones, then taking the major bones (legs, arms, skull and pelvis), tying them into a bundle, then placing them in the ground.

The flexed type of burial which we found is done by breaking the main body joints and folding the body up very much like an unborn child, then placing it in the ground.

That day two other men were along to help with the digging work.

One of these, Norman Brooks, an art teacher at Cape Girardeau's Schultz School, assigned himself to the very tedious and difficult task of freeing the rotten bones from the sandy soil. The rest of us moved a few feet away and began to carefully peel back thin layers of earth to try to find more artifacts without causing any damage to them.

Almost immediately Grantham came onto a ridge line of pottery indicating one of the coffins like the MU team had found. That left Gary Tippen, a fifth grade teacher from Bloomfield, and Tim Ludwig, to again move to another area to avoid interfering with the finds the others were trying to preserve. We soon came across other pottery ridges and began to carefully remove dirt from the edges.

After about half an hour's digging, Tippen uncovered what we thought was the side of a baby's skull. He immediately set to picking away bits of dirt to try to free this important find undamaged.

The area I had picked to work over seemed to be the least promising of all. It nearly proved to be just that. After more than two hours' work, I still had not turned up anything more interesting than sand, a few hints of charcoal, and a very small handful of tiny bone chips. Finally, next to the ridge of pottery where I had been working; I found a molar. Close to this were five of what appeared to be gourd seeds and several bits of red material we think might be very old preserved flower petals.

The techniques we used to uncover and eventually remove our finds are basically well established archeological procedures. We first removed thin layers of earth by shovel. This was done with great care to avoid any damage to artifacts near the surface. When an artifact was spotted or suspected, we went to small mason's trowels to more carefully scrape away loose dirt.

The bones found at the Hayti site had deteriorated due to a high acid level in the soil of that area. They had rotted to the point of flaking into powder under any pressure. Brooks could not use just the trowel to clear the bones, so he began to work on his flexed burial with a precision direction set. His skill as an archelogical surgeon should be obvious from the accompanying photograph.

We were able to salvage the remaining parts of the burial by removing the entire slab of earth in which it was set.

Grantham, as the only true expert in our group, was kept busy hopping back and forth answering questions and making sure that none of us amateurs destroyed anything of value. He did manage to completely outline another ridge of pottery and define the coffin shape it gave.

My few seeds and bits of petal were all for me, so I watched and tried to learn.

All of us were fascinated with Tippen's progress on the baby skull. It didn't seem to have the rottenness of the other bones we had found. In fact, the more of it he exposed, the more it looked like carved stone. It proved to be the find of the day: an effigy pipe. This type of pipe was used in religious and funeral ceremonies and had great importance in the life of the Indians.

We were able to spend only two and one half hours at the site that first day and by the time we returned three days later, the road machines had taken our place. It was a disappointment, but we decided to try a spot a few hundred yards up the ditch bank from where we had been. Again, almost with the first shovelfull we hit archeological gold.

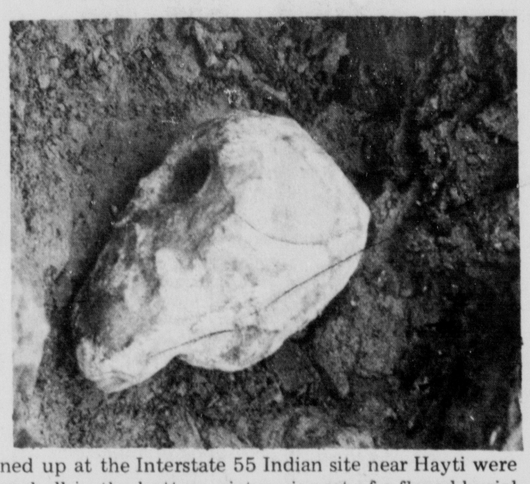

This time it was a beam from the ceiling of an Indian dwelling. The wood was burned to charcoal and, using the black over brown soil color as a guide, was lying barely two inches above floor level. Grantham explained that this may have been an abandoned house that was burned by its users to free the family spirits buried with the family skeletons under the floor.

Grantham also found what might prove to be a village midden or trash dump.

The parts of this site we and the MU team were able to work on are now back underground due to he necessary progress of our interstate highway system. There are other sites like this one that have been or will be discovered in the highway path and then covered over. However, these are only a very small part of the large amount of sites on Southeast Missouri land.

Many sites are known and have been catalogued by the Missouri Archeological Survey for possible future work. Many other sites are found each year during plowing times on many of the farms in this area. Too many of these sites which might be important are not seen because no one is asked to check their value to Missouri's history.

One of the purposes of this column is to "spread the word," that there is an interest in SeMo's ancient history, and that there are people nearby who are ready to try to determine the value of these finds. If any of our readers know of or have on their land a suspected site, or have found a few artifacts such as arrowheads and bits of pottery, and would like to have these finds investigated, you may contact Tim Ludwig at The Daily Standard in Sikeston, or Scott Grantham at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

NEW ARTIFACTS turned up at the Interstate 55 Indian site near Hayti were several and fascinating. The skull in the bottom picture is part of a flexed burial excavated by Norm Brooks. The dissecting scalpel in Brooks' hand was necessary to delicately scrape away the sandy earth from the rotten and powdery bones. The large white block in the picture on the right is an effigy pipe found by Gary Tippen. This pipe was probably used in important religious ceremonies. The photo on the left shows a human molar and five suspected gourd seeds found by Tim Ludwig. Scott Grantham, archaeology and anthropology professor at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau watched over the digging to be sure nothing was damaged.

THE MAN WHO CONFOUNDS ESTABLISHED POLITICAL POLLSTERS

In 1968 Washington Correspondent Bruce Biossat correctly forecast the outcome of most primary campaigns, both conventions and the final presidential choice—all without the aid of computer or staff, confounding all of the established pollsters. Be informed—follow Biossat regularly in this newspaper.

Michael J. Howlett, state Auditor of Public Accounts, believes safe drivers should be rewarded by their insurance companies as bad drivers are now penalized. A driver with no conviction of moving violations during the previous three years is issued a safety citation with his driver's license renewal, but he pays the same insurance premium as beginners or recent migrants to Illinois who have no record of driving experience. "As Secretary of State, I would continue to issue a citation to the good driver to carry in his wallet, but I would add another that he could send to his insurance company," Howlett said. "I would use the prestige of the Secretary's office to try to persuade the insurance industry of the advantages of a preferred rate for outstanding drivers." Howlett said he would also issue a decal sticker to the safe driver to put in the rear window of his car as an additional incentive to keep his record clean.

ART IS THERAPY for Eduardo Castrillo of Manila. Working with a team of assistants who are school dropouts and former narcotics addicts, the 28-year-old Filipino sculptor is creating a 32-foot-tall "The Last Supper" depicting Christ offering bread and wine to the apostles. Castrillo chose his helpers on the brass and steel work, which will take two years to complete, because "I want to give them my art. Whatever they learn will have my imprint."

Cocktail Party Or Tribal Feast

THE YAM FACTOR. By Martin Page. Doubleday. 293 Pages. $7.95.

Here is a critique, from an odd viewpoint, of the whole world of corporate executives and their idiosyncrasies, constructed by showing parallels between the executives and the primitive tribesmen of Africa, India and the islands of the Pacific.

In a typical chapter titled "Me Management Consultant, You Witch Doctor," the author makes the point that both types tell their customers what they want to hear. And he finds tribal equivalents for such people as advertising men and stock market traders.

He also borrows from tribal lore many examples of what business executives can do about promotions and demotions and the drifting from one job to another; the ins and outs of picking a successor; the motivations of salesmen; the comparable status symbols and upmanship.

The title, incidentally, has to do with a custom of the Trobriand Islands. A man who wants to show off his standing in the world does it mostly through his wife; a business executive decks his wife with jewels and minks, but plays down his own image, so that people will think he is indulging in "a rich man's whim."

Perhaps Page has overdone his thesis. He piles example upon example until it gets a bit thick.

Art Exhibit For Blind

By C. G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The "Look but don't touch" warning issued in most museums doesn't hold at the University of Illinois, where a special art exhibit designed for touching has been set up for the blind.

The exhibition in the university's Krannert Museum is aimed at acquainting blind students and other visually handicapped persons with art forms and how they change.

It includes six sculptures of various materials from the 19th and 20th centuries, set up in a separate room of the museum.

The visually handicapped as well as sighted persons may visit and feel the sculptures. Labels on each piece describe the work in print and in Braille.

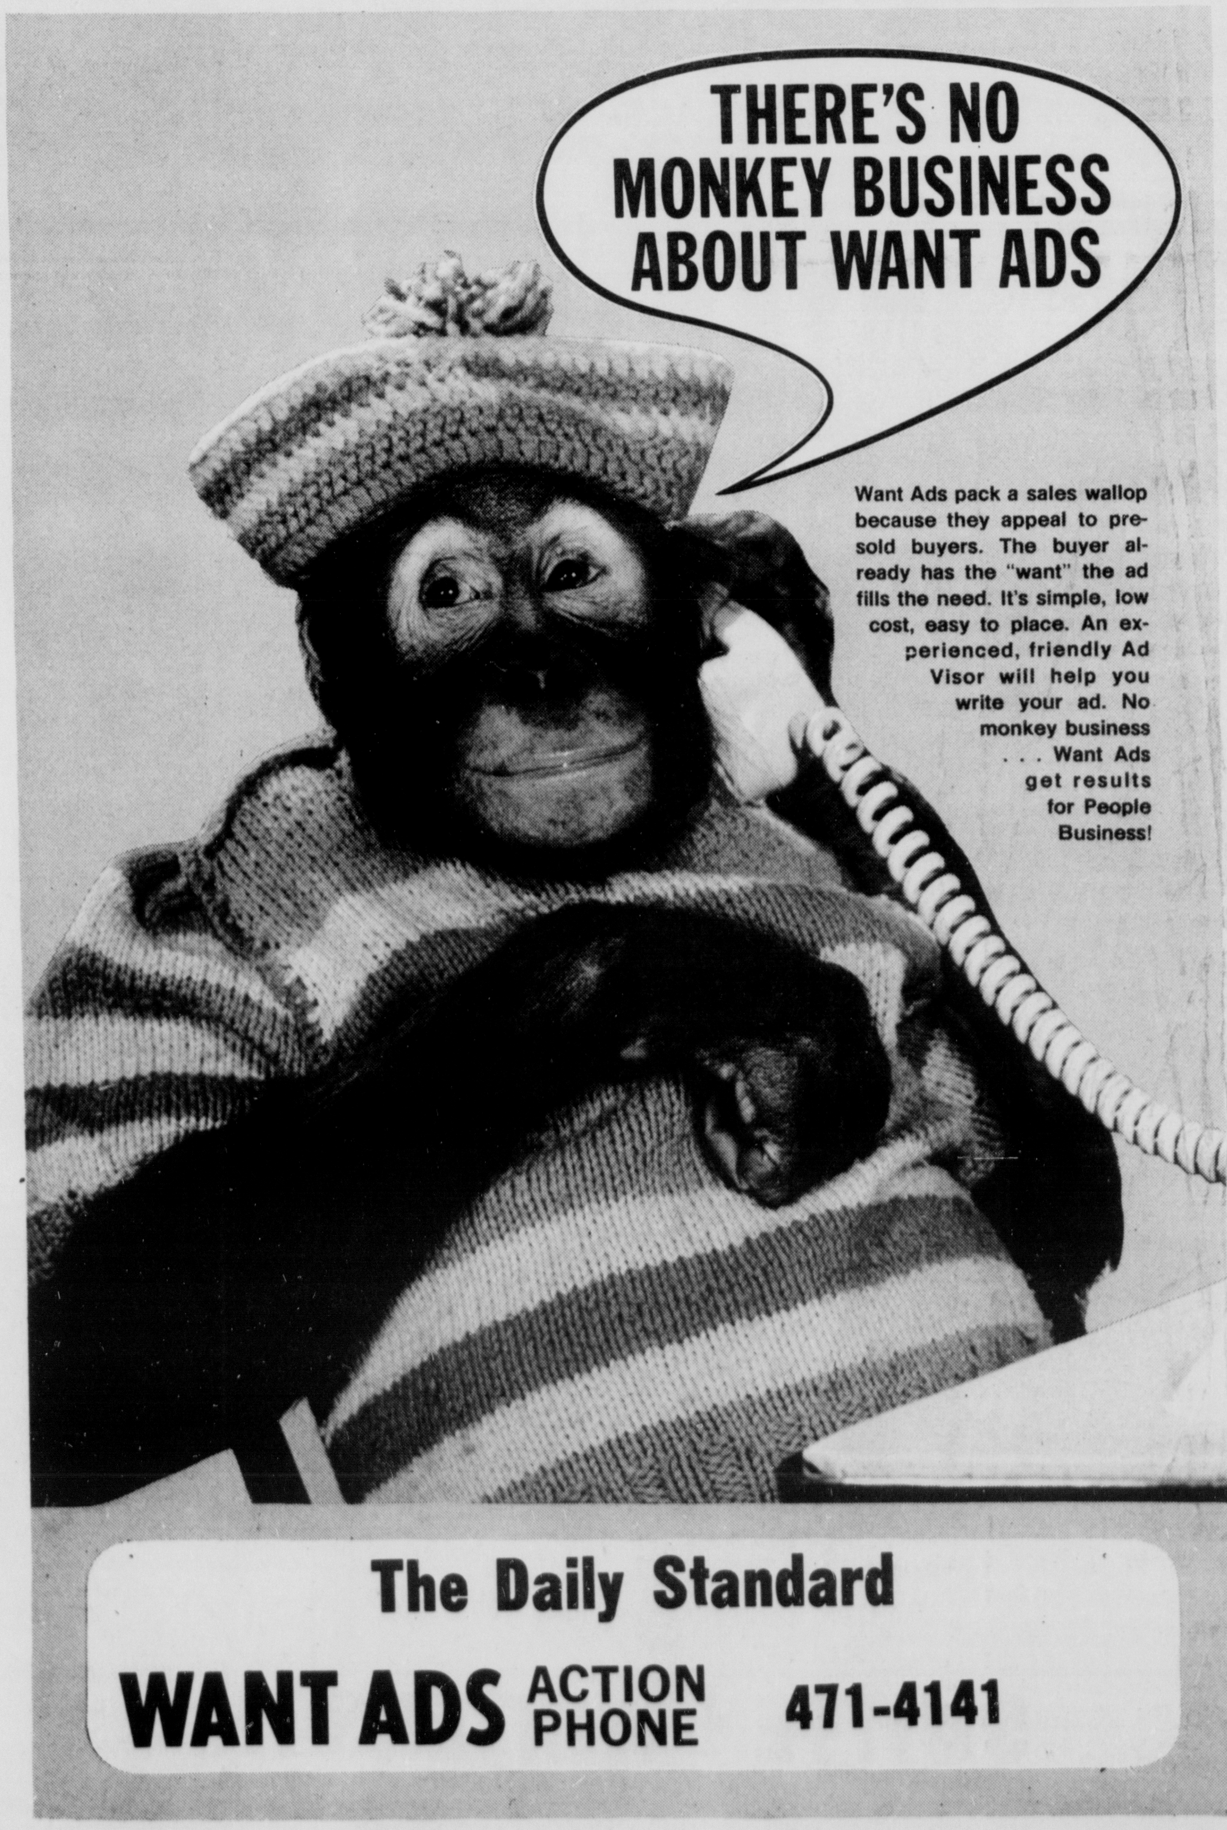

The exhibition is the work primarily of Mrs. Muriel Christison, acting director of the museum, and Ronald Texley, supervisor of services for the blind and deaf at the university.

There are 35 students at the university who are termed "severely visually impaired," and about 200 visually handicapped persons in the area.

Texley said those who have seen the show like it because it gives them an opportunity to become informed about art and art forms.

The most traditional piece in the show is a white marble bust of a young woman done by Launt Thompson in 1861. It reflects the taste of marble portraiture in the Victorian era.

Old Idea Results In a New Novel

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It took author Meyer Levin a while, but he finally got around to writing the book he first planned nearly 40 years ago.

The novel, his latest work, is called "The Settlers," and deals with the flight of Jews from European oppression to Palestine in the early years of this century.

The 66-year-old Levin, best-known, perhaps, for his novels "The Old Bunch" and "Compulsion," says, "I first planned the book in 1934, and I even gave a few pages of outline to a publisher.

"But I was delayed. I didn't have the money to work at it for a long time in security as I needed. Also I felt this book should be done by someone who had lived it more, so I guess I was waiting for a Hebrew writer to do it.

"It wasn't done, and I finally got to an age where I realized that if I don't do it now I never will. The material inside me was pressing for expression.

"It's the same with any art. You get an idea or you discover a body of material and after a while it begins to work its way out of you into the form of a book, or a play, or a film. That's why I write."

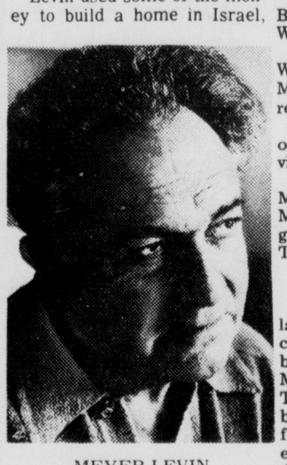

Levin, a relaxed, talkative man, says the actual writing of "The Settlers," finished late last year, took him over four years.

"Just in time," he says with a laugh. "The money I was getting from 'Compulsion' was running out, and I just made it through to this book. I got a pretty good advance for 'The Settlers,' — nothing spectacular, but I can live on it for a few years."

Although he published his first novel, "Reporter," when he was 21, Levin says he was not able to completely support himself by writing books until he was 50.

"I always had another job — journalism, lecturing," he says. "But 'Compulsion' made me enough money so that I could just do writing."

Levin used some of the money to build a home in Israel,

near Tel Aviv, for himself and his wife, novelist Tereska Torres. They have three children. He and his family divide their time between that home and one in New York City. Levin has a writing retreat in both places.

"I have a system when I'm working on a book that I've stuck to since the '30s," he says. "I try to get away to some quiet place for three or four days a week and stay isolated. I only can work seriously when I am alone."

"In Israel I have a place about half an hour from my home. It is very small, but I like it because it is isolated and quiet. In New York, it is the same. I have a barn out in the country and I go there to write.

Comic Rodney Dangerfield 'Don't Get No Respect'

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "I don't get no respect," grumbled Rodney Dangerfield as he explained why he was a few minutes late. "You know, I got this cab driver who kept on talking to me even after I paid him."

Easing himself into the booth in the intimate Manhattan night club that bears his name, the comedian who has built the "no respect" bit into a household word observed with a wry smile that "anyone who talks like that doesn't deserve any respect."

The line and the routines built around it were created almost by accident, Dangerfield said, explaining:

"A number of years ago I was working for nothing in a club in Greenwich Village. I worked three months for nothing. Each night I'd get up on the stage and spill out everything in me to the audience. Then, one night, a funny thing happened. I told them I got no respect, and they went for it — they liked it.

"The people were sympathetic. Probably it's because we all go through the same thing. It's not easy out there in the world. There are days when nothing goes right. Everything seems to go against you. You don't get no respect."

The stint in the Village club was the easygoing Dangerfield's second try at making it as a comic.

"The first time out I was 19," Dangerfield said. "I kept at it until I was 28. I got married during that time. My wife was a singer. We were apart a lot and that was not what I really wanted. I don't like to travel to do shows. Also, a guy that age is kind of young to communicate with mature people. A talking comedian takes years to attain the maturity needed to reach mature adults. I was making a living, but I just quit."

Dangerfield's new career was as a paint salesman. "Life is funny," he grinned. "I made a living selling paint but business is boring. So all the time I kept writing material. I'd write it down and throw it in a drawer. I accumulated a lot of stuff over the years.

"I sold some of it to comedians, but I wanted to do it myself. So at 40 I started working comedy part-time. I'd sell paint during the day and go to the Village at night and try to escape into a fantasy of humor. Humor is a great art. Some men gamble, some drink, me, I go for humor."

Dangerfield, now 49, kept up the double life until he was 44 — "then I gave up paint." The chance to make the break came after he made a successful appearance on Ed Sullivan's television show and suddenly was in demand as a comic.

"You know," he reflected, "I like to try to do the impossible in life. They told me I was nuts when I went back into show business. But I made it. Then they really thought I was nuts when I opened this club of mine in bad times. But it worked and I'm doing well.

"I'd much rather be here," he continued. "I don't feel like traveling to do shows. You get to a point in your life where you get tired of traveling. Maybe I'm lazy."

Unlike some comics, Dangerfield writes his own material.

"I always think I've written my last joke," he said with a smile, "and then, boom, there's another one. But I'm a spasmodic writer. I'll be out driving or walking and I'll get hit with the idea for a joke.

"But," he cautions, "writing a joke is only a quarter of the work. The big problem is continuity. You've got to perfect routines that hang together. The jokes are just part of the routine. Laughter is a tough commodity to find these days.

"By the way, you want to hear my latest...?"

Show Realistic Romanticism

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Song writer Paul Williams is indulging in some fantasy in the midst of an interview. "I think I'll start a Famous Friends Agency. I'll advertise, 'This week we have Stephen Stills on special, playing guitar on your album.' "

Williams has been talking about the music business. "I think one of the nice things about the whole music scene today is that the competitiveness has been taken out of it among the musicians and writers. It seems there is all sorts of room at the top. You constantly find the top-level people turning up on each other's records and concerts. It's really healthy I think.

"It reminds me of the late 1800s in Paris where the French Impressionists influenced each other, talked about their ideas, collaborated."

Other observations Williams has to make about today's music scene is that honesty of presentation is more prized by audiences than slick professionalism and the increasing importance of the song in comparison with the singer.

Williams recently cut an album, on A & M, of his own songs, called "Just An Old Fashioned Love Song." It's No. 143 on the May 6 LP chart. He says, "Audiences have changed. They are appreciative of an honest representation of a piece of material and don't require slick professional talent. I wouldn't begin to compare myself to Art Garfunkel or, to step into another generation, to Sinatra. But I don't think you have to be that nowadays."

About songs themselves, Williams says, "I think we're finally getting back where writers have the respect for the song as an art form that they did in the 1940s. That is why I think songs are lasting once again. We're seeing standards being written by today's young writers, Kris Kristofferson, Paul Simon, the Beatles, Carole King.

"I think we're seeing a return to romanticism, which is a realistic romanticism opposed to the ;Polka Dots and Moonbeams' romanticism of the 1940s. In the '50s we had rhythm-oriented, nonmelodic music. The lyric came back when Dylan wrote about social consciousness. Then the lyric spread out and began to reflect other areas.

PAUL WILLIAMS

"I think there is room today for somebody like myself to write about love, really honestly you know, a realistic romanticism. Maintaining a relationship really IS a matter of working together day by day, though I hate to quote a lyric." Williams has quoted a line from his own "We've Only Just Begun."

He started as an actor and began writing songs instead of watching daytime TV while waiting for his agent to call. One of his first efforts was "Fill Your Heart," written with Biff Rose, which Tiny Tim recorded in 1967 on the B side of "Tiptoe Through the Tulips."

"I never did my starving as a song writer. I starved as an actor for seven years, doing a couple of pictures and a couple of commercials. But when I started writing songs, from the very first they were recorded. I wrote album cuts and B sides. Nobody knew who I was but I was paying my bills for the first time in my life, in fact making a comfortable living.

"Then I got very hungry. I thought if I can do this well with album cuts and B sides, I'll try to write hits. I finally gave up on that and went back to writing for therapeutic reasons. Then I started having hits.

"This leads me to believe that if an audience is capable of anything, it is capable of detecting dishonesty.

"You know, rainy days and Mondays really do get me down."

In the last year and a little more, Williams says, he has had eight songs do well. "We've Only Just Begun" and "Rainy Days and Mondays," recorded by the Carpenters, "Old Fashioned Love Song" by Three Dog Night and "Cried Like a Baby" by Bobby Sherman have become gold.

Other big ones have been "Out in the Country," Three Dog Night; "So Many People," Sergio Mendez and Brasil 66 "Talk it Over in the Morning," Anne Murray; "Waking Up Alone" by himself. And, since Williams listed these, Three Dog Night hit No. 10 on May 6's best-selling 45 r.p.m. chart with his "Family of Man." Williams says, "The gods have been kind to the little fellow," referring to his being not much over 5 feet tall.

Williams wrote music and lyrics on most of the songs on his own album, including "Just an Old Fashioned Love Song." However, on both the Carpenters gold singles, the music is by Roger Nichols, who is 6 feet 5. Williams says, "I think he is one of the really important composers in this country. He sits there and plays a melody again and again while I write the lyrics. He'll play it and say, 'How do you like it?' and without fail I love it."

Both Nichols and Williams are 31. Williams says, "He is two days older than I am. I gave him two days to start a melody."

What's The Law?

The Case Of The Unromantic Bull

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Farmer Brown decided to interject some romance in the lives of several of his cows and leased a bull for stud purposes. Instead of romancing his demure cows, however, the massive bull went after Farmer Brown. Snorting like a locomotive and digging his forelegs into the ground, the charging animal sent Farmer Brown flying over a pasture fence.

Upon landing, the battered farmer sued the owner of the bull for his injuries.

"He told me that critter was perfectly safe," complained Farmer Brown in court. "The fact was only my cows were safe. He didn't cast a romantic eye towards any of them."

"Because my bull went after Farmer Brown didn't prove he wasn't safe," retorted the owner. "On the contrary, his actions were like those of any other red-blooded American bull under the circumstances. After all, anybody knows that bulls have a predilection for going after people. People are frequently cowed by bulls."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the owner pay for the injuries caused Brown by his unromantic bull?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that an owner can be held responsible for knowingly leasing a vicious bull for stud purposes. In this case, observed the judge, the bull leased by Farmer Brown was far from being docile as evidenced by his hostile conduct towards Farmer Brown.

Fair Exhibitors Vie For $333,000 In Premiums

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's worth as a farm state was laid out for all to see as the state's annual fair opened.

Exhibitors began vying for more than $333,000 in premiums offered for the best in farm crops, animals and all sorts of contests, including tractor pulling.

More than $100,000 is offered in the horse show. Horse racing is fading before the mechanical madness of automobiles and motorcycles, but the Missouri Quarter Horse Association is offering $25,000 in its futurity.

The fair will run 10 days instead of the usual nine, and W. C. Askew, fair secretary, thinks there may be 5000 00 paid admissions. A record was set last year—slightly under 380,000.

The general admission fee still is $1 per person and $1 for each car. Grandstand events are free this year, except for automobile and motorcycle races. The only other extra admission price is $5 for the bacon and ham breakfast Aug. 23.

The breakfast will be in the new $70,000 picnic pavilion built this year on the 60-acre camping area which was expanded to handle 2,500 camping vehicles. There were about 10,000 visitors at the camp ground last year.

A concert by a choir of 1,000 persons and a revival service by Bob Harrington, the chaplain of New Orleans Bourbon Street, were on today's program, along with quarterhorse racing this afternoon and Grayd Ole Opry tonight.

Bob Harrington will appear again Saturday morning, followed by sprint car racing in the afternoon and modified stock car races Saturday night.

Sunday will bring sprint car races and the crowning of the pueen of fairs.

Next week's program will include:

Monday—Tractor pulling contest.

Tuesday — Quarter horse racing in the morning, harness and pony races in the afternoon, the Jackson 5 and Nitty Gritty Dirt Band at night.

Wednesday — Mule show, draft horse pulling contest, quarter horse, harness and pony racing; Lawrence Welk show at night.

Thursday — Quarter horse racing in the morning, harness and pony racing in the afternoon: Singer Bobby Vinton, Janie and Dennis and the Bill Anderson show at night.

Friday—Harness and pony races in the afternoon and modified stock car races at night.

Saturday, Aug. 26—National baton twirling contest, pipe smoking contest, 100-mile stock car race in the afternoon, sprint race for stock cars at night.

Sunday, Aug. 27—Motorcycle races morning and night, 100mile sprint car race in the afternoon.

Hello Ron

I arrived in San Antonio, Texas peddling my bicycle at 2:30 p.m. Saturday 8-12-72.

And a large crowd gathered around as the TV men welcomed me to Channel 4 San Antonio. I was on TV at 6 p.m. I will be in San Antonio until August the 27th. And then I will return home to West Frankfort, Illinois.

The people were very nice and helpful on my complete trip.

If anyone wishes to write me I will be at the S.A. address two weeks.

Q—What is the world's largest flag?

A—The Old Glory displayed by Hudson's Department Store in Detroit. It is 104 by 235 feet.

Q—What British actor became a member of the House of Lords?

A—Sir Laurence Olivier.

WELL, THE KIDS SEEM to be having a good time, anyway. But then nobody ever said being an animal was exciting, whether you're a plain old working class horse in Colorado, left, or a fancy show dog named "Kuiney Klutch" in Wisconsin.

Three Sites Offered For Community Building

MALDEN — Three possible sites for a community building were presented to the City Council on Monday night by Les Heise, who is heading a committee interested in securing a community building for Malden.

Heise suggested a 400 by 300 section of ground on the southwest portion of the American Legion Addition Addition at a quoted price of $40,000; a site from Laclede Street north along Beckwith Street including the former E.C. Robinson Lumber Company property with no cost quoted; and a third possible site from Highway 25 west to Smith Street and Route J north to Downing Boulevard excluding Kraft Service Center and the MFA Service Station at a cost of $90,000. This is the Kirkbride property on which the Malden Sale Barn is located.

After discussion the Council voted to have Heise get an appraisal on the Kirkbride property and obtain a firm bid. The City would then explore the possibilities of obtaining federal aid.

Norval Wallen, representing G. H. Walker & Company bonding company of Kansas Cit, briefed the council on a possible new industry for Malden. He asked that if the industry decided to locate here that his company be given consideration when bonds are sold.

A motion to lower rates for taxi stands on the streets from $20 to $10 per month failed for lack of a second.

The council approved the employment of Andrew Richards Jr., as a member of the police department.

An ordinance vacating an alley between the Hester Addition and the Cox Addition was approved by a vote of 3-2.

However, resolutions dismissing suits against all the annexations pending now and asking the court to consider two new annexations, namely Stokes-Cohen and Gregory Southwest, were not voted on because of the lack of a quorum. There were only five council members present and one council member left before the vote was taken.

Replace State Conservation Catfish Mascot

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — There will be a new Blue at the State Fair in Sedalia Aug. 18-27.

Old Blue, a 30-pound Mississippi River catfish and the star of the state Conservation Commission exhibit for over 30 years, died last winter.

Old Blue was seen by an estimated 11 million persons.

New Blue, also weighing 30 pounds, was caught in the Osage River near Warsaw this spring.

He'll make his debut with a coyote, 15 raccoons, a red-tail fox, two possums, a red-tail hawk, several striped skunks, a bobcat and several white-tail deer.

A talking "Smokey the Bar" will also be in the exhibit.

Q—What flowers have the longest blooming period?

A—Orchids, some kinds for five weeks or more.

Q—What metal is liquid at ordinary temperatures?

A—Mercury.

Insurance Makes Gains In New Madrid County

NEW MADRID — A sign of the times, for the average New Madrid County family, is the extent to which it is protected against the financial hazards of daily living.

It had unemployment in insurance, health insurance, accident insurance and life insurance, the mention the major ones.

And, on the long-range side, it has such other bulwarks as Social Security, private pension plans and personal savings.

With respect to its life insurance protection, it is more heavily covered at the present time than it has ever been.

The result is that the capital amount of life insurance in force in New Madrid County has climbed to an estimated total of $111,727,000.

The facts and figures on the distribution of insurance, nationally and by states, are presented in the latest Life Insurance Fact Book and in other reports.

They show that the lives of Americans are insured for a tremendous sum of money, more than $1.5 trillion. And this does not include the substantial amount issued to veterans through the Federal government.

Missouri's share of this total is listed at $34,757,000,000 a big increase over the $14,922,000,000 reported 10 years ago.

Just how much does this boil down to at the family level? The findings are that the average family in the state carries an amount of insurance that is equal to 26.2 months of its net earnings, after taxes.

Applied to New Madrid County and to the average level of income prevailing in its area, ownership of life insurance comes to approximately $16,100 per family locally.

This is considerably more than in many sections of the country and is close to twice the amoung held 10 years ago.

Although ordinary life insurance continues to be the choice of most families there has been a rapid rise in group insurance, which is usually job-connected.

Q—Do earthworms have eyes?

A—Neither eyes nor ears. Sensory cells make them sensitive to light and touch.

Put Some New Life In Your Outdoor Menus. . .

Quick and Easy Menu Ideas for the "Dog Day" Are In Order.

*Salami omelette is a vacation specialty. Slowly brown cubes of salami in a skillet. Add 1 well-beaten egg per person. As edges cook, run a spatula around the edge so that uncooked portion will run to bottom. Cut in pie-shaped pieces to serve.

*Salamis differ from each other in the combination of meats, spice level, salting, curing and shape. Most salami is pork and beef. Soft salami, like kosher varieties, is air dried for a short time or not at all after cooking. Hard salami, like Italian Genoa, is seasoned with garlic and perhaps wine. Hard salamies are air dried for longer periods and are more chewy than the soft varieties.

*Skinless frankfurter pieces and pineapple chunks on a skewer are a good appetizer while the coals are getting hot for the main dish. Brush the kabobs with butter or barbecue sauce.

*Liver sausage and Muenster cheese sandwiches on rye bread served with potato salad make a no-fuss summer dinner. Fresh fruit is dessert.

*As the coals are fading after dinner, let the children pop some corn as a treat for helping clean up.

*Some barbecue clean-up hints. Line the grill with heavy-duty aluminum foil before laying a bed of gravel (for good heat circulation) and charcoal. Rub the grill with salad oil to prevent meat sticking to the bars. Keep a squirt gun or spray bottle of water on hand to douse flames and cut down on smoke.

What You Want to Know?

Q. Is it true that Richard Harris, the fine English actor who has made countless good movies, is going to star in a TV series? What will he play and when will it come on TV? — C.H., San Antonio, Tex.

A. Richard Harris has no immediate intention of starring in a TV series.

Q. I have had an argument with a friend of mine for some time now concerning Wes Stern, who plays in "Getting Together." Did Wes Stern play in a movie title "Three in an Attic"? —L.R., McSherrystown, Pa.

A. You've got the right number, but the wrong part of the house. Wes Stern, who plays Bobby Sherman's partner in "Getting Together," starried in a film titled "Three in a Cellar." However, there was a firlm titled "Three in an Attic," but it starred Christopher Jones and Yvette Mimieux.

Q. I never read much in your column about Jimmy Stewart's TV show. I watched it a few times and I have become a fan. He's so good and the show has a charm. Please print my letter so that people who haven't thought about watching the show will give it a looksee. —Mrs. Y. F., Guilderland, N.Y.

A. The reason you haven't read much about Jimmy Stewart's TV series is that yours is among the first letters we received about the show.

Q. What has become of Albert Finney? I have seen "Charlie Bubbles" on TV six times and I love this movie. When will Finney make another film or TV special or anything? — S.F., Paterson, N.J.

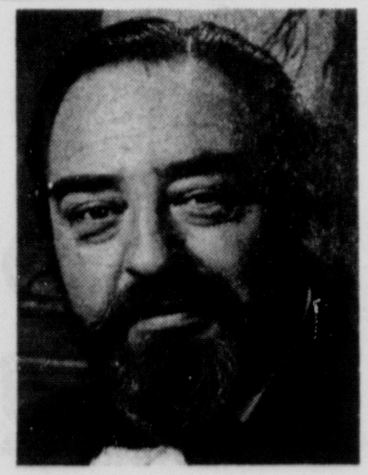

A. Albert Finney chooses his acting assignments with great care and he usually takes time off between films or plays. At the present time, he is not engaged in any film activity.

Q. My favorite new series is "Nichols" with James Garner. He's so super cool and the show is really funny. I like everything about this show, the cast, the writing and most of all, Garner. Is the show doing well in those deadly ratings?—M.F., Newtown, Conn.

A. "Nichols" registered quite well in the first ratings reports...it was in the top 20, which is more than you can say for many of the other new series.

Q. Hasn't anyone else noticed that "Love, American Style" is about as outspoken in matters of sex as all the current movies? The only thing missing is the nudity, and I for one think it's disqusting. I really can't see much different between the low comedy segments on the show and the pornography which is being passed off as film art. —R. McR., Wichita, Kans.

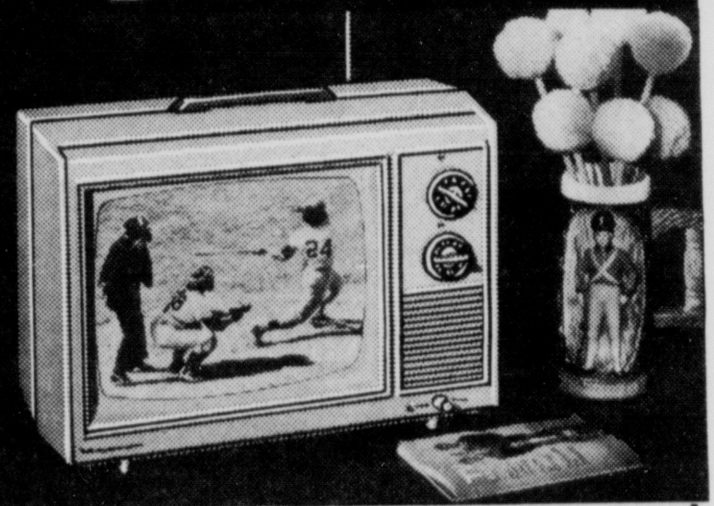

A. In all fairness, "Love, American Style" may dabble in risque double entendres but it can hardly be campared to many current films dealing with far more explicit sexual scenes and speech.

Dramatic Specials On The CBS Network

"Romeo and Juliet" to Be First of the Joseph Papp Productions

The New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater and the CBS Television Network have entered into a long- term agreement under the terms of which a series of dramatic specials will be presented on the Network over the next four years, it was jointly announced today by Robert D. Wood, President of the Network, and Joseph Papp, founder and head of the Theater.

The initial presentation, the Theater's acclaimed production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," will be produced and directed by Papp during the coming season, the date to be announced.

In making the announcement, Mr. Wood emphasized his pleasure in presenting on the Network "one of the most vital and creative forces in the theater today," thereby making it available far from the confines of New York, where it has flourished so dramatically.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be costumed and designed traditionally but executed in the creative theater atmosphere for which Papp has become famous.

Papp has built his Public Theater from a Shakespeare workshop in a Presbyterian church Sunday school to its important theatrical position both at the free admission, outdoor Delacorte Theater in Central Park and in his off-Broadway theater complex in the East Village, where under his direction the initial production of "Hair" started growing.

He is also represented on Broadway with two productions, David Rabe's anti-war satire "Sticks and Bones" and the rock-musical version of Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," which won Tony Awards this year for best play and best musical, respectively. Both productions has started their lives way off-Broadway, the former at Papps's Lafayette Street Public Theater, and the latter in Central Park, where the innovative producer's "Romeo and Juliet" made its debut under star-crossed metropolitan skies.

In the course of his producing career, Papp has done the Bard thoroughly, from "As You Like It" to the acclaimed recent Central Park production of "Hamlet," starring Stacy Keach and Colleen Dewhurts.

His belief in young, contemporary writers as "an important natural resource" has also resulted in a variety of originals, such as Rabe's "The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel," the Pulitzer Prize-winning 1969 production of Charles Cordone's "No Place to Be Somebody," and Jason Miller's "That Championship Season," which won a New York Critic's Award this year along with "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

In presenting his productions on network television, Papp will be realizing his ambition to make the theater "a creative social force" not only in New York but throughout the country.

William Morris Agency represented Joseph Papp in negotiations with the CBS Television Network.
